BRITISH SEIZE U. S. SHIP BOARD VESSEL

London, June 5.—(By the Associated Press)—A steamer bound from New York for Fenit, County Kerry, with corn and mixed cargo, was held up in Tralee Bay by a British sloop, says a dispatch to the Press Association from Tralee today. A large quantity of ammunition in barrels was seized, the dispatch states. A Central News message says the steamer is the Seattle Spirit.

The Seattle Spirit is a steamer of 5,783 tons gross built at Seattle in 1919—a United States Shipping Board vessel. The shipping records show her to have sailed from New York May 18, calling at Boston, whence she sailed May 20 for Cork, Dublin and Belfast.

RULING IS FOUGHT BY TUFTS

Claims Supreme Court Decision on Mishawum Manor Case Was Unjust

Echoes of the famous Mishawum Manor revels were heard today when the petition for the disbarment of Nathan A. Tufts, former District Attorney for Middlesex County, filed by the Middlesex Bar Association, came up for hearing before Supreme Court Justice John C. Crosby.

Melvin M. Johnson, attorney for Mr. Tufts, referred to the Brownie Kennedy case, which figured so prominently in the ouster trial of the former district attorney a year ago, in censuring the action of the Supreme Court at that trial.

"I have ventured," said Mr. Johnson, in his opening plea for his client, "to select one incident in the former trial in which I believe the court has gone a little too far in its finding.

"I am referring to the Brownie Kennedy case. Brownie Kennedy was the mistress of Mishawum Manor. She also figured in other similarly unsavory episodes. In one of these she was brought before the district court of Woburn, charged with maintaining a disorderly house.

COMMON SENSE.

"The Supreme Court at the ouster proceedings against Mr. Tufts found that my client had been blameworthy in having 'failed to make an earnest attempt' to get from the counsel for this woman, William J. Corcoran, or from Corcoran's stenographer, a copy of the evidence given at the Woburn trial of the Kennedy woman.

"If your honor will recall the days of your own Police Court practice, or if you can find a single attorney familiar with Police Court practice in this State to whom that argument will appeal as a common sence one then you can toss my argument into the basket and forget it."

Mr. Johnson also declared that "such a finding does not appeal to the common sense of the bar or of

4 REPORTED DEAD IN TRAIN CRASH

Chicago, June 5.—A Chicago & Northwestern train struck an auto truck occupied by eight persons near Blodgett Station, Ill., today. Four persons were said to have been killed in the first reports reaching the road's headquarters here. Blodgett is a few miles north of Chicago.

SHOWERS TOMORROW THEN WARM SPELL

Boston and New Haven were the warmest places in New England today, each registering 89 degrees temperature at 11 a. m. Weather Forecaster Smith said temperatures would range slightly lower than yesterday. Showers may be expected for tomorrow in Boston, he said. He believes Wednesday will bring warmer weather.

BANDITS ROB MAN OF AUTO

Passengers Tie Driver to Tree and Take $200 at Point of Gun

Cliff Boucher of Woodside street, Salem, a taxi driver, was held up at the point of a pistol by two negroes in Manchester last night, gagged, bound and tied to a tree and robbed of $200.

The robbers drove off with his sedan, according to Boucher's report to the Salem police today.

The police of Salem notified the police of every town in the North Shore and in Boston and gave descriptions of the bandits.

"I got a call from the Essex House at midnight," said Boucher. "I found a colored chap in front of the hotel. He directed me to drive to Manchester-by-the-Sea. He was smartly dressed in a gray suit. He was about forty years of age, weighed about 135 pounds and stood about five feet six inches.

"When we reached Beverly my fare told me to stop. He was joined by a rough-looking colored fellow about the same age and size as my first passenger. The second fellow got in the car.

"On the outskirts of Manchester the first fellow ordered me to stop the car. Then he poked a pistol against my head. The other fellow bound my hands and arms while the first fellow gagged me with a handkerchief. Then they tied me to a tree."

Last Survivor of Napoleon's Army Is Found

By Universal Service.

Warsaw, June 5.—Sergeant Jan Krasinski, a Pole, who says he is the only survivor of Napoleon's armies, proposes to settle down quietly for the rest of his life in the district of Posen, where land is provided by the Polish government for war veterans.

His wife died last year in Russia. She was ninety-eight. Krasinski claims he was born the year after the French Revolution began.

JEW BAN BOOMS PLEA FOR STATE UNIVERSITY

The furore which was raised by Harvard's discussion of a limitation of students, carried on with a strong hint of possible racial discrimination, has given added impetus to the demand for a State university in Massachusetts.

The Legislature has passed a bill calling on Governor Cox to appoint a commission which shall have as its task the investigation of the feasibility of such a step.

Governor Cox has signed the bill, and the money which will enable the commission to operate has been provided. Its appointment is expected during the coming week.

ALL COLLEGES CROWDED.

The discussion at Harvard was brought about by the overcrowding from which that institution suffers. It is running at full capacity now. Dormitories are full, professors and instructors can handle no more pupils. The yearly list of applicants for admission is continually growing larger.

The same conditions exist in practically every other New England higher institution of learning.

In the opinion of many observers of the subject, a State university is the only solution.

Payson Smith, State Commissioner of Education, declares that the answer to the demand for such a university lies solely in the hands of the existing colleges.

"If these colleges and universities are able to give full opportunity for an education to every New England youth who desires one," he said,

MRS. WARD CALLED IN PROBE

Summoned Before Grand Jury Inquiry Into Blackmail Murder Mystery

White Plains, N. Y., June 5.—The June Grand Jury, empanelled today, declined to hear evidence in the Ward shooting case, after County Judge William Blakely, who charged it, pointed out that he formerly had been a law partner of John F. Brennan of Yonkers, counsel for Walter S. Ward, who confessed to killing Clarence Peters of Haverhill, Mass.

It thereupon was decided to issue an emergency call for the May Grand Jury, which has not yet been discharged. District Attorney Weeks plans to submit the case to the May jurors tomorrow. The plans of the authorities will be little changed.

This was the second time the Grand Jury, empanelled in May, was called on to consider some part of the mysterious killing, which Walter S. Ward has stated resulted from an attempt by blackmailers to extort $75,000 from him. As a result of the first appearance of District Attorney Weeks before the Grand Jury Ward, who had been out on $10,000 bail, was rearrested and then again admitted to $60,000 bail.

Mrs. Beryl Ward, wife of young Ward, was to be the first witness. It was pointed out she could not be forced to give any testimony against her husband, although Mr. Weeks insisted he would demand to know of any conversations she had had with her husband before a third party.

The two maids in the Ward household were also to appear for examination regarding any event in the Ward home prior to the day of the shooting, especially the night before. The authorities desired to clear up the story of James J. Cunningham, now in jail as a material witness. Cunningham declared that Peters and another man known as "Jackson" were shot in the Ward home on May 15.

Cunningham claimed to know of

ACTION MAY REVIVE OLD DISPUTE ON SHIPS' RIGHTS AT SEA

Search of the American steamship Seattle Spirit revives a century-old dispute between the United States and the British Empire. In 1812 differences between the two nations over the right of seizing and searching ships brought on a war.

During the Civil War the United States claimed and exercised the right of seizing and searching British ships.

British craft plying in waters controlled by the Confederacy were seized and searched wherever found.

Northern ships of war were especially detailed to raid the commerce between the South and Liverpool, on the principle that the English ships carried contraband or were likely to.

STRAINED RELATIONS IN '61.

There was high feeling in London at the time, but the Union stood on its rights; moderate British statesmen prevented ill-advised action, and the feeling subsided with the end of the struggle.

In the early stages of the World War the positions of the two nations were reversed.

Thus, 1915 and 1916 found Britain claiming and exercising

Attorney Muldoon represented Mrs. Ida Faker of Washington street, East Somerville, charged with selling liquor to John Stevenson of Pearl street, Somerville, who said he was an agent of the New England Society for the Enforcement of Prohibition at No. 6 State street. She was fined $100, and appealing was held in $500.

the right to stop and search American trading ships wherever found.

They justified their course, much as America had justified its position in 1861-1865, by claiming that many American merchantmen were aiding and comforting the Germans, carrying food, raw materials and other articles even more decidedly contraband.

AMERICA AROUSED.

There were exchanges of notes between President Wilson and Downing Street, but the controversy was never settled. For in the meantime the Germans, who had been exercising the even more arbitrary right of sinking American merchantmen found in neutral waters, had aroused the people of America and precipitated this country into the war on the side of the allies.

Seizure of the Seattle Spirit in Tralee Bay may, Washington feels, be the subject of more international "conversations" and exchanges of notes. But official circles are waiting for the complete story of the raid of the American craft before committing themselves.

British Continuez Advance in Fermanagh

Belfast, June 5 (By International News Service)—British troops in Ulster have opened an offensive victory for the British.

The British advance in County Fermanagh continues. British artillery now dominates practically all of the strategic points on the Ulster front.

A British shell is reported to have made a direct hit upon a Republican stronghold in Pettigo, killing seven Republican soldiers.

According to the communique, only one British soldier was killed when the British captured Pettigo in a storm attack.

WHIPPET TANKS IN LINE.

Pettigo is in the southwestern corner of Ulster province on the frontier and near Lougherne.

British whippet tanks are patrolling the frontier and armored motor boats are patrolling Lougherne. Airplanes are on scout duty.

In addition to Pettigo, other border towns are being occupied by the British.

The British forces which captured Pettigo advanced from Enniskillen in two columns, supported by armored cars, heavy guns and airplanes. One column advanced directly upon Pettigo. The other upon Belleck.

Belfast passed through another fiery ordeal of violence over the week end. From three to six persons were killed and more than a score wounded.

There is a heavy exodus of Sinn Feiners from the Ulster frontier counties. At Dromore, Irish Free State troops surrounded the South Mayo headquarters of the republicans, compelling the latter to capitulate.

Four hundred Nationalists were reported to have fled from Belfast last night.

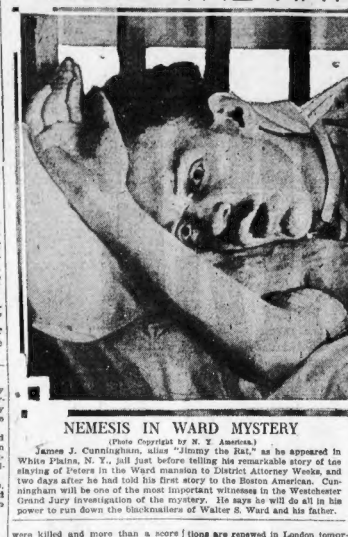
"JIMMY THE RAT" IN JAIL



NEMESIS IN WARD MYSTERY

James J. Cunningham, alias "Jimmy the Rat," as he appeared in White Plains, N. Y., jail just before telling his remarkable story of the slaying of Peters in the Ward mansion to District Attorney Weeks, and two days after he had told his first story to the Boston American. Cunningham will be one of the most important witnesses in the Westchester Grand Jury investigation of the mystery. He says he will do all in his power to run down the blackmailers of Walter S. Ward and his father.

Collins Hopeful; Renews London Parley Tomorrow

Dublin, June 5 (By International News Service).—While war raged in Northern Ireland between British troops and Republicans, officials of the Free State government were today considering amendments to the proposed Irish constitution which will enable them to reach an agreement with the British Cabinet when the Anglo-Irish negotiations are renewed in London tomorrow.

Michael Collins, Minister of Finance in the Irish provisional government, and his ministerial colleagues were hopeful that the amendments, as outlined today, will prove entirely satisfactory to the British.

It is pointed out that the fighting along the Ulster frontier is not between British and Free State troops, but between British and irregular detachments that broke away from the old Irish Republican army because they were opposed to the Anglo-Irish peace treaty.

Richard Mulcahy, Minister of Defense in the Irish Provisional Government, and Roderick O'Connor, commandant of the Republican irregulars, have reached a formal agreeent for co-operation between the Free State and Republican troops.

the attempted blackmail plot against Ward and to have aided the wounded man, "Jackson," to escape from the Ward home. Cunningham insists John Cienzo, arrested in Philadelphia and found to be wounded in the arm, cannot be the Jackson in the Ward case. Cienzo said he came from Wakefield, Mass. Cunningham declared that Cienzo was not the man he had helped.

Another important witness was looked for in George S. Ward. Officials wanted to learn what was behind his message, "I don't pay a cent for blackmail, but would give $100,000 to put that gang in jail," said to have come when Walter S. Ward asked for $75,000.

The parents of Clarence Peters were expected to arrive from Haverhill, Mass., to do all they could in clearing up the case.

Wakefield Suspect Refuses to Answer

Philadelphia, June 5.—A telegram received today signed "Pollard, chief of police of Wakefield, Mass.," says John Cienzo or Cuizo, suspect in the Ward shooting case, is employed by the Demoon Detective agency, New York City.

Another telegram was received from Cuizo's wife, Florence, inquiring into his condition.

The suspect has remained uncommunicative, despite questions showered on him.

Cunningham Has Record in Syracuse

Syracuse, N. Y., June 5.—James J. Cunningham, held as a witness in the Walter S. Ward mystery at New Rochelle, today was identified as a former press agent of the Temple Theatre here. Cunningham also was found to have a police record in Syracuse and Watertown, but charges were not pressed.

Cunningham, through Attorney Richard Byrne of this city, is suing Commander J. K. L. Ross for services. Cunningham was in Ross' employ as an investigator at race tracks.

DYNAMITE USED IN PAWTUXET MILL STRIKE

Efforts on the part of textile mills in different cities of New England to reopen today after weeks of suspended operations owing to strikes among their employes resulted in a flare-up of strike activities arrests, one dynamiting outrage and at least one incendiary fire.

The dynamite outrage and the incendiary fire were both reported from Providence, where the mills of the Pawtuxet Valley have been virtually closed for twenty weeks.

Explosives were placed on the ground outside the home of James Hughes, Crompton Village, near Providence, and tore off the clapboarding and blew out the windows of the house. No one was injured. It is said by the police who are investigating the affair that the explosion was aimed at Robert Burke, a boarder, and an employe of the Crompton Mills.

Less than an hour after the dynamite explosion an incendiary fire was discovered by neighbors at the side of the barn owned by superintendent of the Natick Mills of the B. B. and R. Knight Company, Inc., at Natick. Oil soaked rags were found between the barn and a fence.

In Manchester, N. H., where for four months the mills have been shut down or operating on part time, the strikers held their own today despite the efforts of five cotton mills to reopen. Only a small proportion of the operatives reported for work.

ARRESTS AT MANCHESTER.

The Coolidge Mill of the Amoskeag Company at Manchester received the largest number of operatives, but not enough, according to the textile union leaders, to enable the plant to continue to operate.

Two men were arrested today when 6,000 shouting, jeering strikers lined the street outside the Coolidge mill.

There was no violence, but two of the picketing force were arrested. They gave their names as Frank A. Foye and David J. McIntyre, both of Manchester. Both were charged with inciting a riot. After assignment in court, both men were later discharged.

The police had announced that but two pickets would be permitted in front of the mill. They were on hand with official badges, and backed back of them were thousands of strikers and sympathizers.

The police were compelled to abandon their attempts to keep the throng moving.

IGNORE PICKETING ORDER.

In Fitchburg, where the three mills of the Parkhill Manufacturing Company attempted to reopen, less than a score of workers reported for duty. Mill officials said that 25 per cent. of the normal number of employes were at work, but officials of the textile unions disputed that statement.

At Nashua the strikers ignored the anti-picketing injunction recently granted by the courts, and fifteen hundred gathered in front of the Nashua and Jackson mills to count and jeer the one hundred workers out of four thousand expected and needed in the plants. Two men were arrested in Nashua. They were Hillers Poulon and William Oncslan, charged with violating the picketing injunction.

In Dover, N. H., only a handful of workers of the 1250 strikers appeared for work when the Pacific mills opened today. The mills were forced to shut their gates once more.

Fail to Picket Mills in Pawtucket

Pawtucket, June 5.—Union officials failed to carry out their plan to picket the mills of this city today. No explanation of the failure to picket as planned is offered. Fewer than 100 workers went into the mills. The police continued to patrol the mill district in automobiles which carried riot guns.

BOSTON MAN ASKS PART OF FORTUNE

Syracuse, N. Y., June 5.—The executors of the estate refusing to consider an adjustment out of court, the contest of the will of George Doheny of this city by his grandnephew, Charles F. Glavin of Boston, and other relatives, was moved before Surrogate John Sadler and a jury Surrogate Court today. The Doheny heirs were cut off with small bequests in the will of the former president of the Syracuse Savings Bank. The testament directed that $1,400,000 of the total, $1,600,000, estate go to charities.

SETBACK FOR FELSCH IN COMISKEY SUIT

Milwaukee, Wis., June 5.—Judge John Gregory in Circuit Court today denied the motion of attorneys for Oscar (Happy) Felsch, outlawed baseball player, to have Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, and his son, Louis, appear in Milwaukee under the discovery statute for examination in connection with a suit in which Felsch seeks back pay, bonus and damages resulting from his expulsion from organized baseball.

Roxbury Man Seeks $4,200 Missing From Bureau

For years John S. Madden of Centre street, Roxbury, had kept his valuables in a bureau drawer. Today $4,200 in bills, a promissory note for $100 and rings worth $65 were missing, he told the police. Madden was not positive whether he had been robbed or whether he had taken the valuables from the drawer and put them somewhere else.

the public, and ought not to stand as the findings of any court."

TUFTS IS BROKE.

Referring to the charge that Mr. Tufts had entered into a conspiracy to trick Captain Ralph E. Stearns of Waltham into a compromising situation with a woman so that Mrs. Stearns might be able to get a divorce, Attorney Johnson declared that "under the court's own definition of conspiracy there is no proof that Mr. Tufts entered into any plot to trap Captain Stearns."

The former district attorney was not in court when the hearing began and Mr. Johnson explained the absence of his client as having been due to "two reasons."

"The first," he said, "is financial. Mr. Tufts is without money. He has been out of work for ten months. He has not practiced law in that time. Only recently has he been able to establish himself in business. He has not been able even to meet the cash disbursements of the costs of his ouster proceedings. That is one reason."

"The other is that he feels the futility of this whole affair. Unless we can shake the confidence of Your Honor in the ruling you have already handed down, there is no prospect of a favorable decision in this case."

ASKS CLEMENCY.

Mr. Johnson then made a formal appeal for clemency for his client, on the ground that he had been "punished sufficiently already."

"There is nothing that this court can add to the suffering and agony endured by Mr. Tufts since this matter first came before the court," said Attorney Johnson. "He has suffered mentally and spiritually. He deserves clemency."

Attorney Leland Powers appeared in behalf of the Middlesex Bar Association.

After listening to the arguments of the attorney, Justice Crosby announced that he would take the matter under advisement.

2 KILLED, 4 HURT IN AUTO CRASHES

New York, June 5.—Three serious automobile accidents occurred today in New York and its vicinity. At Millburn, N. J., the auto John Aldez was driving skidded into a pole, resulting in the death of his mother Mrs. Florence Aldez, and his fifteen-year-old sister, Dorothy.

Two other passengers in the automobile were injured. Aldez was arrested, charged with manslaughter

TRAIN TRAPPED IN FLOOD; 38 NEAR DEATH

Passengers on Erie Express Calmed by Girl Singing "The Sheik"

Olean, N. Y., June 5.—The miraculous escape from possible flood disaster of thirty-eight or more passengers on an Erie express train en route from New York to Jamestown, near Long Eddy, about thirty miles east of Binghamton, was revealed on the arrival of three passengers here. The passengers and crew were imprisoned in the train, marooned in the flood waters for twelve hours.

Miss Thelma Burleigh, of this city, a student at Barnard College, en route home for the Summer, was a passenger. She said the train rushed into the tail end of a terrific cloudburst just after passing Long Eddy. Rapidly rising waters in a river alongside the tracks threatened to engulf the tracks and catapulting the coaches into the waters below.

A bridge was swept down after the train had passed over. Tracks were washed away almost as soon as the coaches had passed by, the increasing waters keeping up with the slowly moving train. Another bridge was wrecked behind the train after they had proceeded a mile from the town, where it was discovered tracks were gone in front.

The conductr attached a telephone instrument to the wires, being knocked unconscious from the shock, but finally succeeded in getting through an appeal for aid after six attempts.

Panic reigned as the thirty-eight waited. Miss Burleigh started singing "The Sheik." Then she made candy for the passengers. Fears were temporarily allayed.

Workmen succeeded in constructing an improvised walk above the waters along the tracks to the train, the walk being made of planks boards and debris cast up by the flood waters. Guided by torches, the passengers were led in a midnight procession over the planks through the water that beckoned death on each side.

FAIR LILLIAN NEAR DEATH

ment. Her health has not been good since he return.

As star of both stage and matrimonial handicap probably no woman in is better known in America than Mrs. Moore, who began life December 4, 1861, as Helen Louise Leonard, daughter of a newspaper editor in Clinton, Iowa.

Following a brief career as a choir singer, she made her stage debut in Tony Pastor's, New York, legally adopting the name of Lillian Russell upon achieving histrionic success. She and May Irwin were rivals for honors at Pastor's in 1879.

Miss Russell appeared in a large number of comic operas both in this country and abroad.

She began her matrimonial career during her first stage success, when, at the age of 18, she married Harry Braham, her musical director.

Five yeasr later, having secured a divorce from Braham, she was married to Edward Solomon. Solomon was the father of her daughter Dorothy, whose matrimonial ventures were as numerous as her mother's.

Solomon was divorced in 1894, and within a short time she married John Chatterton, professionally known as Signor Perugini. She was divorced from him in 1896, and married Alexander P. Moore, the millionaire, in 1912.

Having run the entire gamut of theatrical and matrimonial sensations, Miss Russell, under the Harding administration, decided to take an interest in public affairs.

After making a couple of stump speeches and publicly kissing high dignitaries being inducted into office, she was appointed a special immigration agent to visit Europe and study conditions. It was during her return from this trip that she received the small injury responsible for her present illness.

FEDERAL MOVE TO CURB STEEL MERGER

By International News Service.

Washington, June 5.—The government today took a step toward putting a possible check on the big steel consolidations now in the making which have been described in the Senate as constituting the formation of "a second steel trust."

Acting in response to a resolution sponsored by Senator La Follette, Republican, of Wisconsin, the Federal Trade Commission issued a complaint citation against the Bethlehem and Lackawanna steel corporations merger, which is now virtually completed. It charges the combination with stifling competition and with containing dangerous tendencies in restraint of trade and monopoly.

"GO TO WORK," SAYS BOSTON SOCIETY WOMAN TO THE IDLE RICH

SUGGESTS TOIL AS CUREALL

Having Abandoned Social Functions for Labor, Mrs. Potter Says "Follow Me"

By GRACE DES CHAMPS.

"Work—that's the medicine the leisure classes need most. I mean 'society,' too."

This is the emphatic belief of Mrs. Florence Brooks Potter of No. 337 Berkeley street, who has forsaken society and the routine of social functions to earn her daily bread in a Back Bay millinery establishment.

It is the theory which made Mrs. Potter, who occupies a seat in the innermost circle of Boston society for which the social climber would pay a king's ransom, join the ranks of the toilers.

"I know what I'm talking about," assures Mrs. Potter, smiling. "I've tried them both out—years and years of idleness—and the period of contentment I am enjoying now.

"I never was happier in my life! That's the admission of one woman to all the tired women of Boston who look at the time clock and think longingly of the pleasure-seeking existence of society women. In language that can't be misinterpreted: 'There's nothing to it!'

ALL WOMEN SHOULD WORK.

"You're just as well off as they are!"

While she talked, in her extremely attractive apartment in the Kempton, almost in Copley square, Mrs. Potter awaited guests for dinner.

Their names would make the tongues of the already mentioned social climber loll with envy.

The hostess was gowned and coiffured as she must have been in the days when a dinner was the biggest event in the day's entire round of activity.

"I'm terribly tired," confessed Mrs. Potter, suddenly. "It's been a long day, but, oh, I'm so contented! Just my children and my work. What woman could ask for more?

"I really believe," she continued, "that every woman, no matter what particular class of society she may belong, should work for a living for a time at least.

"It will develop her and educate her as nothing else will. The chances are that most debutantes view the world from glasses which cannot discern any farther than their own particular set. Half of them don't realize how many people there are in the world and how terribly dependent upon one another we all are.

"They are out of sympathy with the rest of the world.

"Pride—?" she hesitated, smiling as she sought for a phrase to express her attitude on this point and clear up the matter for half a hundred Back Bay folk who are mightily honored by a Potter invitation, but who are a bit uncertain as to what course to pursue in view of Mrs. Potter's startlingly democratic views.

"If one needed money and had ability, would it be lacking in pride to go out and earn it? Or would it be pride if one remained at home and shammed and schemed humiliating ways to pass by get it?"

Mrs. Potter, apparently, has asked and answered her question.

"For the married woman, especially, who has no children, work is a necessity if she and her husband would remain in sympathy. Left at home all day, the woman gains unprespective. When her husband comes home at night, she has nothing to talk to him about, except the petty details of a bored existence.

"Of course, for the mother with little ones to look after this does not hold. In the latter case, of course, the mother's place is with her children. On general principles, however, it would be better if all women worked—all who can—married or single."

PREFERS MEN EMPLOYER.

Incidentally, admits Mrs. Potter, she would rather work for a man than a woman.

"I'm afraid I would," says she. "Women are sometimes so hard to please. That's one reason why a woman, who is used to having other women do things for her, needs a taste of the working woman's conditions to broaden her viewpoint."

Among other things included in the education afforded Mrs. Potter in her broadwinning course are sidelights on the foibles of women—especially women who are wealthy and a bit inclined to stoutness.

"It's a painful point with them," insists Mrs. Potter.

"They've just got to be told they LOOK slender if scales would break under them!

"Work is a viewpoint, after all," concludes Mrs. Potter.

"It's a state of mind,' and the most important thing about it is personality. It is always the man or woman with personality who gets there."

Mrs. Potter's daughter Penelope, a member of the Vincent Club, and one of the Hub's noted society girls, is working in a downtown publishing house. The elder son is employed as a clerk. Brooks Potter, a second son, is at Harvard. Mrs. Potter is the widow of Albert Potter, member of a widely known Hub shoe firm for several generations.

Nazimova Willing to Testify About Valentino

Chicago, June 5.—"I am distinctly not running away from California to avoid testifying at the Valentino bigamy trial," said Alla Nazimova, Russian tragedienne.

Alla Nazimova

"I am on my way to New York to play in Salome, which has already been held up some weeks awaiting my coming.

"I waited and waited to be subpoenaed, but they did not call me. I am ready at any time to testify as to what I know of Rodolph Valentino, the screen star. I know he married the woman he loved. That is the bigamy they talk of. How I wish I could tell what I know of some of these reformers who are condemning him."

Horgan, one of his lungs pierced by Doody's bullet, is on the danger list. He is twenty-three years old, and gave his address as No. 24 Winter street, Worcester.

The shooting took place at Shawmut avenue and Corning street, South End. Doody fled and Patrolman Cote fired, hitting him in the leg.

Former Harvester Head, Divorced, to Wed Polish Songbird; Ex-Wife to Marry Austrian and Daughter Insists on Becoming Bride of a Swiss Riding Master

What uncanny influence from Europe has warped the lives of members of one of the richest families in America—the McCormicks?

Why are Europeans playing such strange pranks in this foremost family's marital affairs?

Allied with John D. Rockefeller, the McCormicks represent a mountain of gold, yet, see what has happened to tangle their lives.

Harold F. McCormick, until two days ago head of the great International Harvester Co., deserted Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick in the Swiss Alps, and a divorce followed.

Mrs. McCormick is to marry Edwin Krenn, an architect, born in Austria.

TO WED SONGBIRD.

Mr. McCormick is to marry the famous Polish songbird, Ganna Walska, who, when she couldn't sing "Zaza," wanted to cause a sensation by staging a disrobing scene.

Mathilde McCormick, seventeen-year-old daughter of the divorced couple, has caused an international sensation by insisting upon marrying Max Oser, poor Swiss riding master.

"If she does," John D. Rockefeller, her grandfather, has been reported to have said, "not a nickel of my money will she get. Note of my gold will ever see Europe."

Fighting to prevent the marriage of the demure girl, who would rather live in the Alps than in Chicago mansions, Mrs. McCormick went to the courts, then changed her mind as she was about to file a petition for an order to restrain the marriage.

EUROPEANS IN TANGLE.

Because of the publicity stirred up by the family quarrel over the much talked of marriage, Mr. McCormick, angel to the Chicago Grand Opera Company, resigned as president of the International Harvester Co. Those on the inside say he was ordered by the elder Rockefeller because he favored Mathilde's marriage to Max Oser, and announced he would accompany her to Europe and help her to marry.

Europe figures in every part of the wrecking of McCormick's marital happiness. A Polish song bird, an Austrian architect, a Swiss riding master.

"It's uncanny," New York, Chicago and Boston society mutters, puzzled.

Only last Winter Mr. McCormick's name was linked with Mary Garden's. She was the head of the opera company he supported at a cost, it is said, of $300,000 a year. But could Cupid withstand the onslaught of Europe? The beautiful Ganna Walska, divorced wife of Alexander Smith Cochran, American millionaire, who settled a fortune upon her when the divorce suit was uncontested, was pushed forward by Fate and in September, it is said, she will become Mrs. McCormick.

"GOLD A CURSE," SAYS OSER.

What of the gold,' the yellow chinky, lustrous gold?

"It's a curse," says Max Oser, Swiss Romeo, who was accused by Mathilde's mother of being a fortune hunter. "I wooed Mathilde because I love her. She accented me because she loved me. Her fortune instead of being an incentive, has been a drawback and nobody would be more glad than I if Mathilde should suddenly be relieved of the weight of gold which is crushing her."

That Mathilde McCormick, youngest daughter of the three McCormick grandchildren of the oil king, fell in love with a poor Swiss riding master, her mother alone is to blame, it is asserted.

The marriage, she has vehemently declared over and over the past two months, is distasteful to her. Yet when Mrs. McCormick secured her divorce in Chicago in December last in the record time of forty-five minutes, she testified she had been living in Zurich, Switzerland, for eight years.

MET IN ZURICH.

It was at Zurich that Mathilde met Max Oser.

The McCormicks had been married twenty-six years when the divorce was granted.

John D. Rockefeller, believer in the simple life, fought his daughter Edith's divorce bitterly. He wanted no scandal to stain the Rockefeller name. For more than three years Edith Rockefeller and her husband had been separated, it was revealed, when the divorce was granted. Divorce action was delayed year after year at the command of the oil king. Many attempts were made to affect a reconciliation. Mr. Rockefeller was bitterly disappointed when efforts failed.

Mr. Rockefeller was once a poor man and married a poor school teacher. But he frowns on a poor Swiss earning a living by teaching tourists to ride.

WEDDINGS TO COME.

In September, it is said, Ganna Walska will become step-mother of three of John D. Rockefeller's grandchildren.

Soon, it is said, his own daughter and mother of three children will be the wife of the Austrian Krenn, said to be an architect, but acting as Mrs. McCormick's secretary. In fact, she brought him to America from Switzerland where he became attached to the psychoanalytical cult she established in the Alps.

And very soon Mathilde will marry Max Oser and Rockefeller blood in the event of a child, will be blended with one of the Europeans Mr. Rockefeller finds so distasteful.

What is the answer to the mystic European influence that has defeated the very things the oil king with his gold, sought to prevent?

TWO SUMMONED FOR SUNDAY GOLF

Cliff House, exclusive Winthrop Highland's most exclusive hotel, was a storm centre of excited gossip today following the summonsing to court of William W. Partridge, honored guest, and C. Vernon Browne, town official, who were caught playing golf on Sunday.

The summonses represent the first real attempt to apply the town ordinance against Sunday sports to the Summer set.

The summons of Mr. Browne, in particular, is a matter of much unholy joy to the young "natives," as he is a member of the town meeting body which governs Winthrop and which put the ordinance against Sunday play on the books.

It is said in his behalf, however, by his friends, that he has always been opposed to that ordinance.

Mr. Browne is a special policeman, and president of Winthrop Highlands Association. He was summoned to court by Chief of Police McNeil and Lieutenant Douglas.

Baseball, football, and the rougher and more common sports have been taboo at Winthrop Highlands for a long time.

Yesterday the police warned Mr. Browne and another man to stop playing tennis near the hotel. Later they were discovered driving golf balls about on a green running along the beach, and admitted they were playing a game.

According to the officers, Mr. Partridge said "that was just what they wanted; a test case."

Several hundred smartly dressed men and women o nthe hotel verandas enjoyed the excited controversy between their friends and the police on the green.

JINX FOLLOWS IRENE ON TWO BIG LINERS

New York, June 5.—On her arrival here on the new Cunard liner Laconia, Irene Franklin, musical comedy star and vaudeville favorite, admitted that she is a jinx on the high seas. She sailed from London on the new cargo steamer Felicitana of the Furness-Withy line bound for Baltimore. Seven hundred miles out to sea the blades were stripped from the turbine engines and the ship was left temporarily helpless in mid-ocean. Repairs were finally made, which enabled the ship to limp into Queenstown. She then embarked on the Laconia.

MISS DUPONT TO WED LETTER CARRIER'S SON

London, June 5. (By International News Service).—Announcement was made today of the engagement of Miss Alicia du Pont, daughter of Alfred du Pont, millionaire powder manufacturer of Wilmington, Del., and Harold E. Glendenning of Norwalk, Ct., an Oxford scholar. The marriage will take place June 28.

Norwalk, Ct., June 5.—Harold Sanford Glendenning, who is to marry Miss Alicia du Pont, is twenty-five years old, and the son of Percy H. Glendenning, former letter carrier at the local postoffice.

His father died several years ago leaving a modest fortune, accumulated through real estate ventures.

Young Glendenning was graduated from Dartmouth in 1918. His appointment as Rhodes scholar was made in New Hampshire, being the only student selected at that time.

During the war he was stationed at the smokeless powder plant of The du Pont Company at Wilmington. It was while employed there that he met Miss du Pont. He sailed for England to enter Oxford in 1920.

MYSTERY OVER WARRANT FOR WAR FRAUD

By the Associated Press.

Washington, June 5.—The war frauds inquiry of the Department of Justice developed a mystery today concerning the identity of the person or persons who on Saturday swore out a warrant for the arrest of John Lewis Phillips, chairman of the Republican State Committee of Georgia, charging fraud in execution of war contracts.

Commissioner Isaac R. Hitt, who issued the warrant, declined today to say who made the complain. It became known, however, that four persons appeared at Commissioner Hitt's office.

"The Department of Justice is working in the dark," one high official said, "we know nothing about it." The district attorney's office said the warrant was not issued at its request.

'PERFECT LOVER' HAD NAMES OF BOSTON WOMEN

Frank Warren Anderson, "the man of fifty loves," who was shot and killed in a Kansas City hotel by Marie Peggy Beals of Springfield, Ill., one of "the scarlet flowers" in the dead man's love garden, had the names of at least two Boston and three New England girls in the tiny notebook where he kept his love secrets.

The part he played in the lives of some New England women was revealed to the police when they searched his clothes, while the half-crazed, self-wounded Peggy Beals lay in the hospital sobbing for the man she had slain.

The secret notebook of the former war-time aviator, inventor, short story writer, and "perfect lover" contained the names of 47 women. The Boston and New England names had addresses attached in only one instance.

On the list was the name of Miss Gertrude Nelson, a nurse, of No. 21 New street, Salem. How that name came to be among the list of the love pirate is a mystery to Miss Nelson.

"I never knew but one Frank Anderson," she said. "He went to school with me years ago, and I have not heard of him for years and years —not since we were both children."

WROTE LOVE CREED.

"It is possible that the dead Frank Anderson in Kansas City, was one of the many service men who visited our house during the war, when we entertained men of the army and navy as so many other people did. Or he may have got it from a friend who did visit us."

Among the other New England girls mentioned in the love lists of the dead aviator, are Miss Winifred Bishop, Miss Helen Dyer, both of Boston. There is a Miss May Trotter of Gloucester, and Miss Addie Clements of Uniontown, N. H.

In the tiny note book that contained the lists of names, Captain Anderson had written the following love creed:

"Love grows from a tiny seed, planted in the garden of the heart—fertilize it with tender words, water it with kisses, and keep it under the warm rays of adoring passion—

"But when the plant springs up, prune it of its off-shoots; pluck off the insects, and then—

"Some day the real love will grow into the most beautiful flower in the world."

His code, written in the bold print of his hand and given to "Peggy" Beal, "the last of fifty loves," was turned over to the authorities today by the girl, who, portraying in life a chapter of imaginative fiction, slew and killed the man she says betrayed her.

FACES MURDER CHARGE.

Miss Beal is slowly recovering from a self-inflicted bullet wound, administered a moment after she placed a revolver at the base of her "perfect lover's" brain and pulled the trigger.

The tragedy was enacted in the little third floor back, of a cheap hotel, where the pretty nurse and her "perfect lover" had come to view the scarlet love which blossomed from the seed planted in the "garden of her heart" only to be "plucked that another love might grow into the most beautiful flower in the world," the girl told authorities here today.

As strength returned Miss Beal, who will face a charge of murder, according to an announcement from Cameron Orr, county prosecutor, lifted the curtain of mystery which had concealed the dramatic events leading to her suitor's death.

GIRL RECOVERING.

Regretting not the past nor fearing the future, "Peggy" today was on the slow road to recovery.

On her cot in the hospital she manifested no interest when told that she would have to stand trial on a charge of murder. She reiterated statements that she was not sorry she had killed Anderson and that whatever there was in the future for her she was willing to face.

Interest in the tragedy which is the topic of conversation on city street corners and in Kansas City homes, was divided today between the slayer and the possible identification of a mysterious woman who appeared at the morgue yesterday to view Anderson's body.

She kept her hands folded over her heart as she looked upon the face of Anderson, whom she said she had known for several months.

MAY BE HIS WIFE.

Police think the woman may be the mysterious "B." believed to be Anderson's wife, known to have threatened his life, according to a letter from "Dad" to the young Anderson.

This woman is thought to be the same person who called up the Mid West Hotel, where the tragedy occurred, late Saturday night and asked for Anderson. She shrieked when informed that he was dead.

The finding today among Miss Beal's effects on a picture inscribed "Louis Beal, aged two years," led the police to give credence to the story from Dayton, O., that "Peggy" is a married woman and had a child about four years old.

"Warren was a dealer in hearts," "Peggy" said today. "He held a hand of fifty—nine among them.

"He boasted to me of the other women; told me how he had played and love in their hearts, and how when the plant grew, he had plucked the off-shoots.

GLAD HE IS DEAD.

"I don't love any woman yet," he told me on our last tragic night together. 'I have married two—I have played at love with fifty,' and he wrote from his memory their names.

"We sat there, in our last tragic hours together, he telling me of each of his former loves—of their eyes, their hair, their hearts.

"And then I killed him.

"Oh, I am glad—glad he is gone for his death will let other hearts live. That is the motive which inspired me when I placed the revolver at his head.

"I met Anderson—he won me with his devotion, his personality, and the glamor of his war deeds, when, as captain, he served in the air forces during the World War.

"The seed of love was planted at our first meeting in my home town —Dayton, Ohio.

"It blossomed in the garden of interesting experience. Good-night, my heart after he had fertilized it with tender words, watered it with kisses and kept it under the warm rays of his adoring passion—his deeds.

"And then he plucked the blossom of my life with his pledge to marry me.

"How many trusting girls have listened to that same tempter tongue —the tongue of man? I did not know it then—I know it now.

Miss Beal showed a letter she received but two weeks ago.

"Peg—blue sky and sunshine.

"Your 'phone call was most welcome. While it sounded very far away, what I did hear was very dear to me.

"You heard what I said about waiting for Saturday. Whatever out the foolish notion into my head I don't know, but I do know that I want you with me just as soon as the train can bring you.

"I often wonder how it happened that I let you get away from me when I once had you here. I hope, sweetheart, that you'll never, never be away from me again.

"With you again comes Spring and also spring in my life. I hope with all my heart that it will always be Spring and Summer with us, dear."

"All this time you are constantly with me, sweetheart. I just feel that you are near me. Let us try an experiment in mental telepathy. Suppose next Sunday night at 8 o'clock each of us tries to make our mind a blank and then think of one another, and concentrate for about five minutes. It will be as Peg, dear, to you with all my heart and soul. You are my only sweetheart of all times.

"WARREN."

"They tell me that the jury which will try me will have the right to bring me in not guilty if I feel I do. What is life of the body when the heart is dead?

"Perhaps womankind may know better the ways of man if they did hang me."

MURDER CHARGE.

The girl must face trial on a charge of murder. Prosecutor Orr said today:

"Miss Beal shot Anderson while he slept. The law can find no excuse for such an act.

Miss Beal in a statement issued as the hospital denied Orr's charge She said:

"He was not asleep. We had talked. He had told me of his other loves and we had retired. I lay there sobbing in the dark. Our love had died and my heart was broken.

"Then—I remember it now—I got up and in the dark groped my way to my trunk, where an old revolver given me by my father lay. I got it. I fired blindly—I don't know how many shots. If he spoke, I did not hear him. I don't know how I hit him, for I never fired a gun before. Then I shot myself. He was not asleep."

Discussing the case, Prosecutor Orr said:

PLANNED TO KILL.

"This woman gave herself to this man knowing he was married. They lived together as husband and wife. Then he tired of her and decided to cast her off.

"She had been reading a book—'Thirty Maid of Mars.' In it she saw a picture—a girl with a dripping dagger standing over the still form of a lover she had killed.

After mind turned to the thought and she planned to kill.

"Perhaps a jury will soften to the story of betrayed love she told but the State hopes to prove that this woman killed because she feared to tell the world after her sin—as she committed with open eyes, with a married man. There is no betrayal there. The law of God and law of man is equally clear on that."

MANY ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

Orr has conducted a search for letters written by Miss Beal to Anderson. He failed to find one. That the man destroyed not only Miss Beal's letters, but all other correspondence addressed to him, is the opinion of detectives investigating the case.

As authorities dug deeper into the life of Anderson and Miss Beal they found the "perfect lover" to be a man of marked accomplishments. A man who "played in hearts"—aviator, inventor, author, painter.

Effects found in Anderson's trunk in the death room revealed his strange character.

Letters breathing his love for Miss Beal are filled with reference to his interest in tennis and of his intentions to teach her that game. In the same missive he begged her to study Esperanto.

His old letters appear to have been spent between an attempt to short-story writing—brief sketches about life as he knew best; the air service, the department store and affairs of women's hearts, and rough drawings of what appeared to be the brain children of an inventor.

LIFE LIKE ORCHARD.

There was one device bearing his name which the drawings indicated was designed to bring about interior lighting by sunlight. Another was an electrical contrivance for paging guests at hotels.

Anderson spent much of his time in writing. "Life" is the title of one of his works, written in his own hand, and kept among his effects. Some extracts follow:

"Life is like an orchard of variegated fruits. At birth we enter it; death is its exit. Each one of us is permitted to walk through this orchard but once. There is no turning back—we must go onward.

"Scattered through this orchard are the fruits of joy, happiness, contentment, pleasure, comfort, success, pain, sorrow, misery, failure, love, hate, kindness, cruelty and many, many others.

BITTER AND SWEET.

"As we journey through the orchard we pluck and eat of these fruits. Some are tasteless, some are sweet, some are bitter. All contribute to mold into a definite being before we pass through the exit and enter the garden of death.

"Some pick the fruits of laziness and indolence as they enter the orchard. These fruits fit them but poorly to reach up and grasp the apples of success and happiness which grow on the taller trees."

The mysterious "Leona"—Mrs. Leona Wignall of Collingswood, N. J., home of Anderson, referred to by the slain man's father in a letter of warning mailed to his son on May 22, lured the Kansas City police today:

"I am not an old love of Warren Anderson's. We were merely acquainted. I barely knew his family."

SHAWMUT BANK ADDITION IS OPENED

The addition to the National Shawmut Bank building at Water, Congress and Devonshire streets was open for business today.

The result is one of the finest and most complete banking plants in the country for this eighty-six-year-old institution, which has for decades held a commanding place in New England finance.

Architectural beauty as well as practicability characterizes the addition and the whole plant.

Bank officials had expected to open the new safe deposit department along with the addition, but this had to be postponed. When the department is finally ready for business it will provide the last word in the science of protecting the dollars of the frugal from the jimmies of the ungodly.

ARCHITECTURAL UNIFORMITY.

Uniformity, first of all, was considered in building the addition. Architecturally it follows the established style of the old part. The Devonshire street entrance shows walls of Italian Bianco, Grand Antique and Formosa marble in the panels, pilasters and orders, with bronze base mouldings. Capitals and frieze mouldings are in harmonious combinations.

The receiving tellers, paying tellers and coupon department are located on the street floor of the new wing. Executives will occupy the space in the old part made available by the removal of the tellers.

Bookkeepers, check tellers and sub-departments will be on the second and third floors. On the mezzanines of the old and new floors are stenographic and telegraphic departments, and filing, credit money, publicity, business extension, research and library departments.

LUNCHROOM FOR EMPLOYES.

The fourth floor of the new wing is given over to a lunchroom for employes and rest rooms for women.

The National Shawmut Bank was moved to its present stand in 1907, and at that time Colonel William A. Gaston and the other officials believed the plant was big enough to last as long as the bank itself.

The remarkable growth is in no small part due to the activity of Colonel Gaston as chairman of the board of directors.

He recently made known his desire to succeed in a big way in another field, by announcing his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate.

Being white, the chances are less that they will be stolen, it is said.

RADIO TAKES PAIN AWAY AT DENTISTS

The greatest substitute for laughing gas ever invented is the way dentists describe the very latest in radio devices.

The more disagreeable features of dentistry, the dizzy burr of the grinder, the sharp twinge of the probe, and other unpleasant things, are now relegated to the limbo of the past by means of a radio receiving set placed next to every dentist's chair.

Dentists claim that a little light music while teeth are being "fixed" helps greatly to relieve the pain and unpleasantness by taking the mind of the patient off his trouble. Anyway it serves to lessen greatly the monotony of long, tedious hours in the dentist's chair.

A radio receiving set, with phones to clap on the patient's ears is now the latest thing.

Does it work? Look at the smile on the face of Mis Frances Teasley of No. 94 Ditson street, Dorchester, as she listens to the latest joke. She never notices if Dr. Harding touches a tender tooth.

Question Box for Radio Fans

Send in your radio difficulties. Address: Radio Editor, Boston American, 39 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

W. H. S., Somerville—The grid condenser is a fixed condenser, as you suggest. The directions should have read "Turn the grid variometer to zero." The sketch is all right.

W. E. N., Gloucester—You do very well to get Newark and Schenectady on a crystal detector. Your signals fade through some change in atmospheric conditions, which scientists are unable to explain. There is no way of improving your reception except by purchasing a vacuum tube, although a fixed condenser shunted the phones should greatly improve the quality.

R. F., Hudson—It is doubtful whether you would be able to pick up Medford with a crystal set in your location, especially in Summer. The only way to know is to try.

W. G. L., Medford—Your hookup seems to be a good one. There would be no advantage in increasing the number of taps on the vario-coupler. If you increased the number of taps and number of turns, you would increase the wave-length, but not the range. As the variometer would have to do all the tuning in the secondary, it would be well to have a twenty-three plate. If by experiment you can get just the right number of turns on the secondary for the 180-metre broadcasting, the eleven-plate condenser, would do for close tuning.

Paris, France.

A GOWN of white taffeta, from Colette, is made interesting by threads of silver that run at intervals through its bouffant skirt, and gather the material into little bands at its edges. The pointed bodice is reminiscent of the moyenage, with its sleevelessness giving it a modern air.

THE sleeveless, bolero-like arrangement of the bodice of a Paquin gown for evenings is matched in smartness by the treatment accorded the sides of its skirt. Unusual, indeed, is the puckering over one hip and the flat bows introduced to hold the drapery in place on the other. The gown is of satin moire etched with crystal beads.

JEW BAN AIDS UNIVERSITY

"the demand will probably die down. But, on the other hand, if the existing colleges cannot provide for all the prospective students in this section of the country, the answer is obvious. A State University will then be needed."

The question of a State University came up at the Massachusetts School Masters' meeting in April, 1921. Then Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard, spoke against it. He said such a university would result in duplication. And he concluded that "there were no young people in Massachusetts who, if they wished, might not attain a higher education."

Yet, at Harvard last week a statement governing limited enrollment began as follows: "The great increase which has recently taken place in the number of students at Harvard College, as at other colleges, has brought up forcibly the problem of limitation of enrollment. We have not at present sufficient class room or dormitory room to take care of a further large increase."

Authorities at Harvard were quick to announce that they would not resort to racial discrimination to cut down enrollment. Another prominent institution of learning in Boston—namely, the New England Conservatory of Music—is discriminating against the Jews, according to Jewish students at the conservatory.

CONSERVATORY'S ATTITUDE.

By an attitude far more tactful than that displayed by the Harvard faculty, yet as deep and intricate as musical technique itself, the New England Conservatory of Music—both faculty and students—has solidly arrayed itself against the ever increasing influx of Jewish students into its halls, like the picked shock troop of the late war, sweep all competition aside in their thirst for knowledge. Under unfailing efforts for musical education, is the sentiment of the Jewish students interested.

The New England Conservatory does not limit the enrolment of Jewish students as Harvard is alleged it would do. The Jewish students are admitted, but once in the Conservatory the atmosphere is made so disagreeable, the estracism is rendered so complete, their examinations are conducted so unfairly that a student of any other nationality, except those of a race inured to persecution by thousands of years of suffering, might easily falter and quit the institution. This is the startling experience of some Jewish students interviewed.

WHAT STUDENTS SAY.

"It is a case of put up, shut up, or get out," declared one Jewish student, who asked that his name be withheld lest it might lead to his embarrassment.

"The condition of affairs exists not only among the male students but among the girl students as well," declared another student.

George W. Chadwick, director of the Conservatory, is the storm centre of the latest controversy that has spread throughout the East.

The Jewish students allege that it is a well-known fact that the Jewish students do not get along well with Mr. Chadwick, and further add that the faculty has no use for a Jew, "except when they are in need of a player," remarked a student.

FOUR END LIVES IN WAVE OF SUICIDE

Despondency over family matters, ill-health and business reverses prompted four men to commit suicide, three by inhaling illuminating gas and the fourth by shooting himself through the head, while a woman, a girl and a boy attempted to take their lives.

The dead are:

Christopher Scott, fifty-five years old, No. 63 Shaw street, Fall River. Gas.

Otto Medin, forty-eight years old, No. 429 Adams street, Dorchester. Gas.

Charles F. Rider, sixty-five years old, No. 14 High street, Springfield. Gas.

Carl Frederickson, forty-five years old, No. 10 Tomlin street, Waltham. Shot through head.

Mrs. Mary Miller, thirty years old, No. 94 Ray View street, Fall River was the woman who attempted to take her life. She jumped into the Mount Hope Bay. She was rescued by a patrolman.

Medin was found dead in his basement room with five gas jets turned on in an adjoining kitchenette stove.

Police say Medin had been separated from his wife

Charles F. Rider, the aged Springfield man who committed suicide locked the door of his room, turned on the gas and then seated himself in a chair awaiting death to overtake him.

He had been despondent for some time following his wife's removal to a hospital.

Business reverses caused Carl Frederickson to shoot himself, Waltham police say. The shooting occurred in the kitchen of his home.

Scott, the other Dorchester victim, lived alone in a tenement. Neighbors had not seen him for several days. They smelled gas and broke in the door and found him dead on a couch. A gas burner was open. He had been despondent.

Angered because her parents would not allow her to go on an automobile party, Annis Clmeroi, seventeen years old, of May street, Millville, attempted suicide by drinking arsenic of lead. She was taken to the Woonsocket, R. I. Hospital and her stomach pumped out. Later she was able to return to her home.

Leo Allaire, sixteen years old, is on the danger list at Worcester City hospital. He was found unconscious in the bathroom of his home. Gas was flowing from an open jet. The police believe he attempted suicide

Dr. Swisher agreed. Twin girls arrived.

WEALTHY TECH WOOER LOCKED IN A CELL

Insistent Greek Who Pursued Simmons Girl to Chicago Is Held

Details of an attempted courtship, in which, a former Tech student, a wealthy Turk, wildly enamored of a pretty Simmons College graduate and former employe of the Tech library, drove the girl from Boston to Chicago and then followed with his unwelcome love, came to light today when John N. Zorzos, a Turk, was arrested in Chicago.

The girl is Miss Helen Marie Wurtzbach, daughter of Carl W. Wurtzbach of Lee, Mass. She is 24 years old and was formerly curator of the bookstack at the Tech library. Zorzos was arrested in Chicago when he appeared there and renewed his wwe efforts.

Zorzos met her in Tech library, to complained to the college authorities of his annoyance and Zorzos was taken to the Psychopathic Hospital. He was pronounced sane.

Zorzos renewed his unwelcome courtship. The girl departed for Chicago without giving her address to any of her friends. Zorzos was dismissed from Tech, but by some trick got the girl's Chicago address.

UNWELCOME COURTSHIP.

Among the many unwelcome features of the lovemaking of the young Turkish Romeo, according to friends of the girl, was the peculiar desire to force Miss Wurtzbach to go to Montreal with him and preach the doctrine of the dominance of male over female.

Several times during his forced attentions on the girl he is said to have threatened to take her life if she refused to go with him and preach his peculiar doctrine.

Fellow-boarders at No. 51 Ellery street, Cambridge, say Zorzos, who is 25 years of age, and the son of wealthy Constantinople importer, was to have been forced into a marriage with a Turkish woman by his parents, but had refused to return for the wedding. His arrest followed a particularly outspoken letter to Miss Wurtzbach.

At 87 Inman street, Cambridge, where he first lived when he came to enter Tech in 1920 other roomers said that he had made himself agreeable to a number of girls, apparently not centring his affections upon anyone in particular until he met the pretty librarian.

TECHNICAL CHARGE.

Technology faculty members voted his expulsion on technical charges of failing to keep up in his studies, but declared there were other considerations. One of these things, it was learned, was the complaint of Miss Wurtzbach that Zorzos had been annoying her.

Zorzos confronted her Saturday in the library. Startled because of his many threats to take her life unless she submitted to him, she fainted and he fled. Police officers were called and the city was searched, resulting in his arrest.

GLORIA SWANSON DIVORCE RUMOR DENIED

New York, June 5.—A report that Gloria Swanson, film star, had obtained a divorce from Herbert K. Somborn abroad, is untrue, says Mrs. Frank Wilson, wife of the director of first National Screen Productions. She and Miss Swanson were room companions on a recent trip abroad, Mrs. Wilson said.

Gloria Swanson.

"I was with Miss Swanson during her entire trip. We arrived in London about April 25. We stayed in London a week, then went to Paris, where we stopped for ten days. We were in Berlin for a week, returned to Paris and then sailed. One could not get a divorce in such a short period."

Back With His Family After a Series of Adventures

LLEWELLYN JORDAN.

2-YEAR-OLD BOY MISSING FOR DAY IS FOUND

Having captured a police station single-handed, two and one half year old Llewellyn Jordan, who vanished from his home Saturday afternoon, was recaptured late yesterday by his frantic family and returned to the Jordan domicile on Northfield street, South End. In the meantime the little fellow had the time of his life, at the East Dedham street police station, and adventures enough to last him a year.

He had jumped into the pond in Blackstone Park, been fished out by a policeman, ridden on the officer's shoulder to the station, been officially booked as "Little Boy Blue," enjoyed wealths of candy, sodas, ice cream and peanuts, and finally fallen asleep. It was thus his father found him, and carried him back to his tearful, but forgiving family.

BAKHMETEFF BAN HAILED BY BORAH

Washington, June 5.—"Very satisfactory; a victory has been won!"

This was the comment today of Senator William E. Borah, Republican of Idaho, on the State Department's decision to withdraw recognition of Boris Bakhmeteff as the "Russian ambassador" in the United States on June 30. Borah has been an insistent advocate of Bakhmeteff's expulsion and American recognition of the present Russian Government.

Boris Bakhmeteff (International News Reel)

The status of the Russian ambassador has been under discussion for months, ever since the Hearst newspapers and American Senators pointed out he represented no existing government and had never accounted for vast sums which had passed through his hands.

The State Department announcement said action on the reactionary Bakhmeteff had no bearing on the question of American recognition of the present Soviet government.

The treaty opposes the possible formation of an Arab confederation under the Aegis of Great Britain.

TAGUE PLEADS TO DRIVE OUT KU KLUX

Congressman Peter F. Tague of Charlestown has issued an appeal to "all classes and creeds of American citizens" to combat the growing power of the Ku Klux Klan.

"All liberty lovers, Jew or Gentile, Catholic or Protestant, should realize what this vicious organization means, and strive to oust it from the position it has gained in American life," he says.

Speaking of the recent primaries in Oregon, where the issue of pro and anti-Ku Klux Klan was clearly drawn, Congressman Tague said that the Klan is working for the subjugation of certain races and religious sects. He then referred to a case in Alabama which shows the power exerted by the Klan where it is unopposed:

"Some months ago I had directed to my attention the case of P. H. DeBardelaban, a citizen of Sylacauga, Ala., and a World War veteran who was abducted, taken to a remote place in the woods and severely beaten. DeBardelaban came to Sylacauga about seventeen years ago, coming from New Orleans, and established a drug business there. By strict attention to business his patrons soon came to regard him as one of the community's most valuable citizens. In the town was another druggist envious of the success of DeBardelaban. He organized a branch of the Klan.

"DeBardelaban was the only Catholic merchant in the town, and on him was centred all of the venom, all of the bigotry of his adversary and his bigoted group of followers.

"As a result of the beating he received DeBardelaban lost the sight of one eye, and is now practically an invalid.

"After he recovered he returned to Sylacauga and obtained positive evidence to convict the perpetrators of the deed. This he presented to the prosecuting attorney for the county and was laughed at. In turn he went to the Attorney-General of the State, and to the Governor, both of whom informed him that there was nothing to be expected from the State authorities. Inasmuch as he (DeBardelaban) was a Catholic.

"Later the Department of Justice sent an operative into Alabama, who returned and reported that the facts as presented were substantiated by sworn statements and affidavits, but that the United States courts had no jurisdiction to prosecute, as that was the function of the State courts."

2,000 "Naturalized" by Klan at Joliet, Ill.

Joliet, Ill., June 5.—What was declared to be the largest gathering of the Ku Klux Klan ever held did not end until approaching dawn dimmed the fiery cross high over the assemblage.

It was said that every city north of Springfield in Illinois and many points in Iowa, Wisconsin and Indiana were represented. The number in attendance was estimated at from 30,000 to 50,000.

While bonfires flamed from surrounding hills, more than 2,000 candidates were "naturalized" into the "Invisible Empire."

The meeting was held in the woods near Plainsfield, and white robed and hooded figures guarded the roads while the weird rituals were conducted by the light of flaming torches. The candidates were grouped before a throne, while on the outskirts men stood with folded arms to halt any curious.

IT'S SURELY ENOUGH TO UPSET A FLIVVER

Winsted, Conn., June 5.—Arthur Holmes is going to change the horn on his flivver. Arthur motored to Copake recently, and found his way blocked by poultry. Loud toots of his horn gave him more trouble, for a flock of ducks, thinking it was the leader of their gang calling, answered by rushing to the road where they parked in front of Arthur's car. "Darn the ducks," said Arthur.

"Quack, quack," replied the ducks as they gazed at the little brass horn that sounded so like a duck.

DR. ELIOT APPROVES CAMPS FOR CITIZENS

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president-emeritus of Harvard University, endorses the Citizens' Military Training Camp, in a statement to Captain MacDonald, recruiting officer at the headquarters of the First Corps Area.

"If we are bound to have war we must prepare for it, and the training of young men for this event is necessary. The Citizens' Military Training Camp, outside of its physical and moral discipline, meets that end," says Dr. Eliot.

DOCTOR URGES WOMEN TO BECOME FLAPPERS

Worcester, June 5.—"The flapper is aiding physical emancipation," said Dr. Dale E. Atwood of St. Johnsbury, Vt., at the annual convention of the Massachusetts Osteopathic Society in the Hotel Bancroft. He said women needed strongey abdominal muscles, and claimed that bobbed hair, sport skirts, low heels and other flapper fads were a means to this end. He urged all women to become flappers.

Y. D. DEDICATE FIREPLACE WITH BATTLEFIELD DEBRIS

An inspiring dedication of a memorial fireplace was held at the Y. D. Clubhouse on Huntington avenue, when privates of the 26th Division set ablaze debris and earth from French battlefields in memory of their dead comrades.

Into the open place was heaped German propaganda leaflets, shell torn French fences, crutches, blood-stained bits of uniform and lastly a handful of earth from the French battlefields. Then four veterans advanced with tapers and set it ablaze.

CHILDLESS WOMAN, 100, ADOPTS "DAUGHTER," 75

Lowell, June 5.—Childless at the age of 100 years, Mrs. Lucy Cook, an inmate of the Old Ladies' Home, has adopted Mrs. Ellen Dudley, aged 75 years as her "daughter." The adoption is not a legal one but the older woman is nominally the parent of the 75-year-old flapper. Mrs. Cook was born in Canada on June 5, 1822. Her father was John Scott. She married John L. Cook, an Englishman living in Lowell. She has resided in the home for the past 30 years.

MOTORCYCLIST ACCUSED BY GIRL OF ATTACK

Lowell, June 5.—An invitation to ride in the side-car of his automobile through a lonely stretch of woods near North Chelmsford, which was accepted, is said by an eighteen-year-old girl of that town to have led to an attack on her by Alexander Simoneau, thirty years old, driver of the motorcycle. Simoneau, who lives on Barnum street, Lowell, and who is the father of two children, was arrested by the police on statutory charges after the girl had told her story. She said he had met her while she was on her way to church.

3,000 ORPHANS TO BE GIVEN AN OUTING

Three thousand crippled and orphaned children of Greater Boston will be guests of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association on Wednesday, when the annual pilgrimage of the city's unfortunate little ones to Nantasket Beach is held.

The outing will be under the direction of Chester I. Campbell, secretary of the association.

Each youngster will be provided with a flag, a horn, candy and popcorn, and a program of entertainment has been planned for them at Nantasket. Games and athletic events will be held for those children who are able to take part. Dinner and all the frills, including ice cream and cold drinks, will be provided.

Anyone wishing to contribute an automobile to the day's outing, will aid plans for the outing considerably, says Secretary Campbell, as many cars are needed.

Automobile owners who wish to aid may call Beach 2740, the office of Mr. Campbell.

Anti-Dancing Society to Invade Local Colleges

A branch of the Anti-Dancing Society among colleges and high schools will soon be started in this section of the country. This society has now a membership of over 1,000 in the South, and is known as the Alpha Delta Sigma Society, and was launched by Miss Virginia Hamilton, daughter of a Baptist minister, in Atlanta and student at Westhampton College, Richmond, Va.

CHRISTIANS PUT IN TURK TRENCHES

By the Associated Press.

Adana, Cilicia, June 5—Mustapha Kemal Pasha, head of the Turkish Nationalist Government, has given orders for the conscription of all Christians resident in Cilicia. They are to be formed into labor brigades and sent to the front line trenches to assist the Turkish Army in its war against the Greeks.

The Turkish newspapers are coming out boldly in advocacy of a policy of clearing out all Christians from Cilicia, so that the country may become purely Moslem, thus removing any basis for interested action here by the big Christian powers. Numerous Christians are being imprisoned on political charges, and their estates confiscated.

TO ASK MEDAL FOR BOY HERO OF LYNN

Francis Modricker

Francis Modricker, sixteen years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Modricker of Lynn, will be wearing a Carnegie hero medal soon if his friends have their way.

Modricker plunged into Flax Pond and rescued Elmer Cooper, fourteen, who was drowning after having been put through a course of swimming instructions by the young hero. He was about to go down for the third time when Modricker went to his rescue.

A movement has been started to bring the facts before the proper authorities in order that Modricker may be rewarded.

LYNN FIRE DRIVES TENANTS TO STREET

A two-alarm fire in the centre of Lynn's business district did more than $5,000 damage. The blaze was in the basement of the Bergengren building at Central Square. Smoke came up from the basement filling the floors and seeping into the offices. Patrolman Robert Lynch, W. J. Tobey and Henry [illegible] assisted the occupants to safety. Among them was Lucius C. Sargent, seventy years old.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Carnival in Aid of Children's Museum Next Friday

By BETTY ALDEN

THE future debutantes and financiers of Boston's four hundred contingent are no end interested in the June Carnival, which is to be held next Friday on the grounds of the Beaver Country Day School, Brookline. The affair is in aid of the Children's Museum of Boston, and the Ways and Means Committee of the Museum, which is running it, announces all sorts of things to thrill the youngsters.

An absolutely breath-taking magician will be on hand to amuse the "younger set" with his tricks, to say nothing of a mysterious seeress, who will tell you all about your past and future. Then there are to be all sorts of sports, including pony riding, as well as fancy dancing and music.

Mrs. Robert W. Sayles of Chestnut Hill is chairman of the committee in charge, which has procured a most imposing list of patronesses to sponsor next Friday's affair. Among the distinguished matrons who have lent their names to the event are Mesdames James B. Ames, Robert Atkinson, Oakes Ames, Joseph Brewer, John W. Bartol, Edward D. Brandegee, Caspar G. Bacon, Horace Binney, Davenport Brown, Albert F. Bigelow, Charles P. Curtis, Jr., Livingston Cushing, Samuel Cabot, William H. Claflin, Jr., Eben S. Draper, Samuel A. Eliot, William Endicott, Jr., Henry Endicott, Jr., J. Murray Forbes, W. Scott Fitz, Alexander Forbes, Allan Forbes, George P. Gardner, Charles P. Greenough, 2d, Thomas B. Gannett, Roland F. Hopkins, Louis B. Harding, Arthur W. Hart, J. Mott Hallowell, Chandler C. Hovey, Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, Rudolph Weld and T. Mott Shaw.

I NOTE that Mrs. George Higginson opened the season of entertainments at Lenox when she recently had a company of thirty at Rock Lawn for her daughters, the Misses Theresa and Lee Higginson. The latter are cousins of Miss Nina Higginson, daughter of the Francis Lee Higginsons of Commonwealth avenue and the North Shore.

Both Theresa and Lee Higginson, whose Winter home is in Chicago, are ardent devotees of golf, and ever since their arrival for the season at the beautiful Berkshire resort they are frequently to be seen on the links. Before going to Lenox, by the way, they came on to Boston for a brief visit with the Francis Lee Higginsons, where, needless to say, they were the centre of not a little social attention. They are frequent visitors in the Hub, and are always most heartily welcomed by the very many prominent Higginson connections here.

"SPARTINVENTO," the Italian villa of the Arthur Littles at Beverly Farms, is once more occupied for the season, following the return from abroad of the Littles, who make it their custom to spend the cooler months in delightful travels on the Continent.

Those who pass the hot season along the Shore will recall that "Spartinvento" was badly damaged last Fall by fire, but it is entirely repaired now, and quite ready for occupancy.

Just a year ago yesterday, Mrs. Little's daughter, who was then Jessie Means, was married to Arthur L. Richmond. Since her marriage, the young matron has taken almost as active a part in the affairs of the smart set as when she enjoyed her Jessie Means days. She was one of the fair "chorines" of Adelaide Whitman's clever musical comedy, "Why Not," presented this Spring in aid of the Infants' Hospital. Her husband, a Harvard '15 man, was also a member of the cast of "Why Not."

IT is to a house of deep sorrowing to which Miss Penelope Curtis returns from the Mediterranean trip, which was so abruptly and sadly interrupted by the death of her father, Edwin Upton Curtis.

Several months ago Miss Curtis, a member of the Sewing Circle and the Vincent Club, sailed for Europe with a group of friends, little knowing of the sadness in store for her. Upon hearing the shocking news of her father's demise, she very naturally took steps to return to those shores as quickly as possible, arriving in New York on Friday morning. She was met at the pier by her younger sister, Miss Margaret Curtis.

BARE LEGS ARE 'WORN' IN PARIS STYLE PARADE

By C. R. BERTELLI.

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

Paris, June 5.—The world's greatest display of fashion scintillated at the beautiful Chantilly race course, where all society congregated to gossip, bet and watch the traditional Diana stakes.

There was a kaleidoscopic panorama as thousands of beautifully clothed women paraded wearing the latest styles. A great portion of New York's social register was represented in the throng.

From the jumble of fashions three notes were predominant.

Brown is all the rage, for the first time in ten years.

Bare legs will again be "worn."

Women choosing opposing types of male cavaliers, throw their own costumes and complexions in bold relief.

Frequently when society women couldn't produce brown robes, they appeared on the arm of a tanned companion. Indian princes, especially, are in great demand.

Emilienne D'Alencon, a famous beauty, appeared with a satin robe the color of Autumn leaves, her neck, shoulders and arms bare and her legs dyed rich walnut, contrasting with a strangely curled silk wig on her head.

Turning food into Beauty—

That's what this girl does—Can you equal her?

The glow of rich, red blood coursing through your veins, the response of muscles resilient with strength, a spring in your step and a light in your eye—

In short, "up and at 'em." That's what perfect health means.

The body draws its supply of health from the food you eat. You can calculate to a nicety the reserve you are building up for your future needs—work or pleasure.

The greatest demand of the body is for an energy food, fuel for the human engine, quickly converted into power.

Equal with this is the necessity for keeping up repair, building the stuff that forms the very fiber and framework of the body.

Bread-and-Milk is the perfect food for both these uses.

It contains the carbohydrates that supply energy for the immediate use of the body and leave a reserve of strength for protection

It also contains the rebuilding material for muscles and tissues—the bone-building substance.

Bread-and-Milk eaten together form a perfect, balanced food. It supplies the body with energy and carries new materials to the parts in constant need of repair—all with no tax on nerves or digestion.

One meal a day of Bread-and-Milk — and your best gift—good health—your chief asset in the business of living, is insured against the inroads of poor nutrition.

For keen, abounding health, eat one meal each day of Bread-and-Milk.

MOVIE WORLD NEWS AND GOSSIP

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

MAE MURRAY is indignant.

Following the announcement last week that Universal was dragging off the shelf an old production, "The Delicious Little Devil," starring Miss Murray with Rodolph Valentino in the lead, came the advertisements in the New York newspapers. These read: "Rodolph Valentino and Mae Murray in 'The Delicious Little Devil.' First time on Broadway."

As a matter of fact, this film was made in 1919 at Universal City while Miss Murray was one of their stars. Valentino, as I pointed out last week, was at that time only appreciated to the extent of being a more or less insignificant lead. Now his name appears even before Miss Murray's.

Universal productions are made for "small town" purchasers. They are finished up in four or five weeks and shipped in an almost endless stream throughout the villages and towns of the United States. It has been only comparatively lately that they have attempted more worthwhile pictures—notably Priscilla Dean's and Von Stroheim's—and have given them Broadway showings. It is true, therefore, that this would be the "first showing on Broadway" for "The Delicious Little Devil." Miss Murray, however, is going to court about the way it is advertised, and it is thought that the showings will be cancelled.

COSMOPOLITAN PLANS

ALMA RUBENS

THIS will be a busy summer at the International studios on Second avenue. Plans are already under way to make a picture starring Lionel Barrymore in one of the Boston Blackie series by Jack Boyle. "The Face in the Fog."

Around August 1st Robert Vignola will have finished all work on the Marion Davies special, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and will be ready to start on the filming of the Ibanez novel, "Enemies of Women," with Alma Rubens in the leading role.

"The Pride of Palomar," Peter B. Kyne's best-selling novel, will be filmed in California on the exact locations of the story. Marion Davies will make a screen version of "Little Old New York," a stage success of last season.

"The Valley of Silent Men," under the direction of Frank Borzage, is well under way. It is taken from the story by James Oliver Curwood and deals, naturally, with "the wide, open spaces, where men are men." Miss Rubens and Lew Cody are the featured players.

GLORIA SWANSON HOME.

GLORIA SWANSON returned to this country from her trip abroad—chiefly centered in the smart shops of Paris—on the Mauretania last week, and left for the West coast yesterday afternoon. She will start work on "The Impossible Mrs. Bellow" immediately. Fashion note:—Miss Swanson left America with one trunk and returned with six.

VIDOR FOR "PEG."

IN spite of the rumore that Rex Ingram would doubtless be chosen to direct the destinies of Laurette Taylor in the screen version of her husband's comedy, "Peg O' My Heart," King Vidor has been chosen by the Metro Corporation for the momentous occasion. The "shooting" will start in about a month.

ON THE INCE "LOT."

COLLEEN MOORE is putting in time between Rupert Hughes pictures in playing the lead in a Thomas H. Ince production, "Affinities," taken from a story by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

And speaking of Ince, Douglas McLean, who has been one of the shining lights of those pictures, is ready to come East to sign another contract. He has had several offers to consider.

ANNIVERSARY OF ANCIENTS CELEBRATED

Capt. G. Hudson.

Following their tradition, members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery began the celebration of their 284th anniversary with a revelle sounded by rolling drums and shrill fifes today at Copley Square.

Captain Geo Hudson of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company greeted the revelle corps, headed by Drum Major Clarence H. Knowlton, who has sounded revelle for the Ancients for forty-seven consecutive years, and breakfasted with his fellow officers at the Copley-Plaza.

Surrounded by members of the company who had journeyed from all parts of New England early in the afternoon decorated the graves of Robert Keayne, in the Kings Chapel burial ground. Keayne was the first captain of the Ancients.

C. H. Knowlton.

Following a brilliant parade which started on State street, at the threshold of the commonwealth's history in State House, the company swung into Washington Street to School Street and thence up to Beacon Hill, where, according to a custom as old as the company itself, they were joined by Governor Cox and marched to the Old South Church, where impressive services were held.

ENERGETIC DRUG FROM MEXICO HITS NEW YORK

New York, June 5.—The Battery has had its first taste of marihuanha weed, one of the most energetic drugs known to medical science.

Llonido Romero, a Spanish sailor, was arrested, charged with distributing it through the medium of cigarettes at ten cents a cigarette and he has admitted, according to the detectives, that he peddled fifteen or twenty of them.

Marihuanha is greatly favored by Mexican revolutionary generals—for their men—just before going into action.

BONUS BILL TO PASS SENATE THIS WEEK

By Universal Service.

Washington, June 5.—"The soldiers' bonus bill will be enacted by the Senate this week."

This was the prediction made to a Universal Service correspondent by Senator Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and author of the pending bonus bill.

Senator McCumber said that he will move to report out the bill when the Senate convenes tomorrow. A slight modification of the present legislation already has passed the House.

The optimism voiced by Senator McCumber that the bill will receive immediate White House approval is not shared by other Republican leaders in Congress, however. Within the last few days Senators who have conferred on the bonus question with the President have come away with the strong impression that he not only disapproves the bill in its present form, but may veto it. As late as Friday President Harding told an official visitor that he "had not changed his attitude on the bonus question in the slightest degree."

Apparently Senate leaders believe that if they pass the bill, and shift the responsibility to the White House, they will vindicate themselves in the eyes of bonus advocates throughout the country.

Didn't Believe Jonah Swallowed Whale, Says Epitaph

East Thompson, Ct., June 5.—During the memorial services in the cemetery near here, visitors discovered a marble shaft that has for half a century marked the resting place of Jonathan Richardson, a well known character in the last century.

On the marble shaft appear these words: "Here lies Jonathan Richardson, who never sacrificed reason to superstition's god, and didn't believe that Jonah swallowed the whale."

FATHER INSISTS SONS WERE POISONED

Newburyport, June 5.—Although police are inclined to believe that Alexander and John Comas, aged six and four, respectively, were accidentally drowned in the Merrimac River, where their lifeless bodies were found last week, Peter Comas, their father, insists they were poisoned and dropped in the water by a local laundry man.

Comas asserts that the man frequently induced his sons to enter his shop by giving them fruit and similar gifts. He is convinced, he says, that the laundry man made away with them and threw their bodies in the river to avoid detection.

Vital organs taken from the youngsters bodies have been sent to Boston for chemical analysis.

REO SPEED WAGON

"The World's Best"

If you did not know—if from your own experience or observation you could not testify to—the truth of that statement, we would not use it.

Here is one product that is so outstandingly superior that it knows no real rival—no equal.

No other truck has done, or can do, its work.

None has shown the same stamina or efficiency.

None has proven equal to carrying its loads—and living as long.

It is literally true that this Speed Wagon will carry "a pound or a gallon or a capacity load" between any two points, quicker and cheaper.

Its range of highest efficiency—its greatest margin of economy over all others—is from 500 to 2500 pounds.

"A quarter-ton to a ton-and-a-quarter."

But—inasmuch as it will cover any route with no load, or loaded to full capacity, cheaper than either a flimsy-light, or an excessively heavy truck—it has proven to be the world's most economical carrying unit.

The majority in favor of the Speed Wagon is over-whelming—as evidenced by the fact that today there are more than 70,000 in use.

That's more than of all other makes combined—of similar type or size.

Demand is great. Only way to obtain a Speed Wagon is to order at once.

Delay means disappointment.

WHISKEY HARD TO OBTAIN IN PORTLAND

Lid Clamped Down on Border Traffic—Very Little Moonshine Found

Portland, Me., June 5.—Alcohol is the favorite beverage in Portland, the Forest City, at the present time.

To such traits have the majority of the bibulous been reduced through the unremitting activities of Sheriff King Graham and his merry men.

With the exception of a little Scotch whiskey, coming in from Canada, and sold entirely in case lots, alcohol is practically the only liquor to be obtained in Portland.

This alcohol, 190 proof, and according to the authorities, out of government bonded warehouses, is being shipped here in large quantities from Boston.

$35 A GALLON.

It is sold by the runners at $35 a gallon, and may be obtained from pedlars in half-pint bottles for $3 and $4. "Splits," a particularly dangerous mixture of bad alcohol and temperance drinks, also are disposed of for the same price. There is a little moonshine said to come from Lynn, Lowell and Lawrence, Mass.

Those who cannot or will not pay these prices, chiefly waterfront habitues, drink cologne, hair oil, denatured alcohol and patent remedies with a high alcoholic content.

In addition a large part of the population is said to be engaged in home-brewing, while outside the city farmers occasionally dispose of hard cider.

With the opening of the tourist season, when thousands of out-of-State automobiles will flood the highways, it is expected that quantities of good whiskey will find its way into the city from Canada. Considerable also will be run in by boat.

At the present time, however, there is but little good liquor to be had, and it is extremely difficult for a stranger to buy a drink of any kind. Because of the activity of the sheriff and the fact that there have been a number of deaths from wood alcohol, among strangers, the pedlars are very shy.

Night taxi men and bellboys in the hotels refuse to procure liquor for strangers, and unless they make the acquaintance of someone "in right," they are sure to go dry.

MUST BE KNOWN.

According to the well-informed, the running of Scotch whiskey from Canada is controlled by one or possibly two local business men, who have established a monopoly. The whiskey is run through by automobile and sold at from $55 to $90 a case, delivered anywhere. BUT, the purchaser must be known.

The actual running is done by men hired for the purpose, not residents of the State, and so well has the traffic been covered that Sheriff Graham has thus far been helpless to prevent it.

All other attempts to run Scotch in from Canada have been nipped in the bud, and as a result alcohol is the only thing coming into the city at the present time. In the Winter, when trans-Atlantic steamers put into Portland Harbor, brandy and gin of all sorts may be obtained, but not now. Real gin is almost a thing of the past in Portland, and even in sickness it is impossible to obtain brandy.

"LUNCH PARTIES."

In consequence the favorite pastime of numberless residents of the Forest City, is alcohol punch parties. There are social gatherings, sometimes card parties, at which groups of neighbors and friends meet. A pint or more of grain alcohol is obtained, together with a quantity of fruit extracts and a bowl of punch is prepared. The fruit extracts disguise the taste of the alcohol, and the result is a well-known "flowing bowl," with all its old-time propensities.

"Alkey," as it is called, also is used with near-beer, lemon and lime, coca cola or ginger ale, tonic julips or other tonic. The first two

DANCERS WIDOW WHO IS NOW POSING IN NUDE

The erection of a nude figure of a beautiful woman over the grave of the dead aviator-dance wizard has brought to light the fact that his widow has posed undraped for several art studies by Mrs. Sally Farnham, although the memorial figure was not posed for by Mrs. Tremain

MRS. IRENE CASTLE TREMAIN

MYSTERY IN MEMORIAL TO CASTLE

New York, June 5.—Who was the handsomely-formed woman who posed for the nude statue to be placed over the grave of Vernon Castle in Woodlawn Cemetery?

The mystery has been deepened by refusal of Mrs. Sally Farnham, who designed the monument, to reveal the identity of her model.

Mrs. Farnham admitted, however, that Mrs. Robert Tremain, formerly Mrs. Vernon Castle, widow of the famous dancer and aviator, has recently posed for several nude statues.

"Mrs. Tremain is one of the best undraped models from whom I ever worked," declared the sculptress, exhibiting a model of the famous society dancer as an undraped Bacchante. Her only coverings consisted of a sprig of palm held in either hand.

"The model for the monument to Mr. Castle was selected by Mrs. Castle and myself from several young women. It will be placed on his grave before Mrs. Tremain returns from Europe next month."

Blindness Fails to Daunt This Brave War Veteran

James T. Riddervold of No. 246 Huron avenue, Cambridge, who lost both eyes in the World War, believes that every disabled soldier, no matter how badly disabled, can still make himself useful.

This veteran, with the aid of his wife, has adopted the business of selling brands of coffee he knew about before the war. He tests the coffee by the scent, selecting only the best.

He sells it to a number of customers in the Back Bay through the Disabled Ex-Service Men's Exchange, No. 441 Boylston street.

80 KILLED WHEN AN EXPLOSION SINKS SHIP

Buenos Aires, June 5. (By the Associated Press).—Eighty persons are believed to have perished in the sinking of the steamer Villa Franca on the Parana River, near Posadas, on the boundary between Argentina and Paraguay.

The vessel carried thirty cabin passengers, seventy second-class passengers and a general cargo, including one hundred drums of naphtha. One survivor said the sleeping passengers were awakened and rushed on deck to find the vessel enveloped in flames. A few seconds later there was a heavy explosion which caused the boat to fill and sink rapidly nearly a mile from the Paraguayan shore.

Some of the uninjured survivors swam ashore. An unconfirmed report said the only cabin passengers saved were the members of a family of North Americans, and three others.

CONFEDERATE SOLDIERS LAUDED BY HARDING

Washington, June 5.—President Harding paid high tribute to the gallantry of the soldiers of the South during the Civil War at memorial services here for Confederate dead buried at Arlington National cemetery. The spirit which actuated the men in gray to fight for what they believed to be right, is the same spirit that now makes them loyally devoted to a united nation.

FEAR TROUBLE AS STRIKERS ARE EVICTED

West Warwick, R. I., June 5.—Attempts to be made today by High Sheriff Michael Lynch of Kent County and troops of militia to evict numerous strikers' families throughout the Pawtuxet Valley are expected to result in serious trouble.

Major Samuel Hall, in charge of the troops, has mobilized all available militiamen. Officials warning has been issued by labor leaders that they will place the blame for any bloodshed on the manufacturers.

"If the Pawtuxet Valley runs red with blood, the mill owners and they alone will be to blame," declared Organizer James M. Dick, addressing a gathering of 2,000 strikers in Pontiac.

The houses from which the evictions are scheduled to take place are those of the B. B. & R. Knight Corporation, whose workers have been on strike for nineteen weeks.

It is said that Sheriff Lynch has secured many eviction writes, and is prepared to forcibly remove the furniture from the homes and place it by the roadway. Word of the intended action of Sheriff Lynch reached the strikers yesterday.

"Tomorrow," said Organizer Dick, speaking to last night's gathering, "the sheriff and the military forces will be mobilized in Pontiac to help the manufacturers to accomplish by force what they cannot or will not accomplish by legal and peaceful means.

"Major Hall, Sheriff Lynch, Deputy Sheriff Whitman and the Attorney-General of Rhode Island evidently have determined to use force. I want to issue solemn warning that may come of this, the manufacturers, and the manufacturers alone, will be to blame.

CIGARETTE LED TO FATAL SHOOTING

Because he refused to take a cigarette, William J. Horgan of Worcester was shot through the lung and fatally injured by Morris Doody of Jamaica Plain in the South End shooting affray that attracted hundreds to the scene.

Horgan is dying at the City Hospital and Doody will be arraigned in Central Court charged with assault with a loaded revolver with intent to kill.

According to the police, Doody, a casual acquaintance, offered Horgan a cigarette which dropped to the ground. Horgan started to pick it up when he was proffered another. He refused it. Then Doody said: "What, are you a wise-guy? I've got a gun and I can kill you."

Horgan disputed this fact and Doody fired. With blood streaming from his wounds Horgan ran into the arms of Patrolman Cote. The officer fired several shots in a chase wounding Doody in the leg. He then captured him.

Both men were taken to the City Hospital, Doody's wound is not serious.

AMERICANS ON RHINE MUST LEAR TO SWIM

Coblenz, June 5 (By the Associated Press).—American soldiers who wish to remain with the occupation troops must prove their ability as swimmers. An order has just been issued by Major-General Henry T. Allen providing that all the members of the American forces be marched with their respective units to a swimming pool, where they must swim at least fifty yards. Those unable to do so will be given the necessary instruction. The order was issued because several soldiers were drowned last Summer.

DISMISSAL OF PRINCIPAL IS FINAL

Edward E. Thompson is "all through" as principal of Winchester High School.

Chairman Robert F. Guild of Winchester School Committee made that quite plain today, in announcing that, as a matter of legal form, the deposed principal would be given a private hearing by the committee tonight.

"Our action of dismissal is final," said Guild. "The meeting will probably last about twenty minutes. We are considering Thompson's successor.

Thompson, who continues nominally in charge until his successor arrives, was dismissed for alleged lack of executive ability, and insurging students threatened for a time to strike to get him back.

He will make a statement to the school committee, in the course of which he will refuse to accept demotion from the post of principal to that of teacher.

NORTHCLIFFE REPORTS RHINELAND PROSPEROUS

London, June 5.—Lord Northcliffe has just returned from a trip, incognito, to Rhineland, according to an announcement by the London Times. Despite the intense German hostility to him, Lord Northcliffe managed to preserve his incognito, and talked with scores of Germans. He considers Rhineland's prosperity equal to that of any part of the world, and describes its present birth rate as "terrific."

He stated that in his opinion the presence of the American, British and French armies of occupation had changed the manner of Rhineland dwellers towards foreigners. They are no longer brusque, he declares.

Thirty-two men were arrested and a quantity of gambling equipment seized when a squad of police raided rooms on the second floor of a building at No. 103 Park street, Chelsea. Members of the raiding party were obliged to use sledgehammers to break down heavily-barred doors.

At least a score of men escaped arrest by leaping from windows of the hall. When the prisoners were taken to the station to be booked, a large crowd gathered and staged a demonstration.

Blanche Sweet.

This was made known here by the latter's representatives, who stated that the wedding will take place in New York later this month. Only a few intimate friends will be present at the ceremony.

Miss Sweet admitted to friends that the rumor that has been going the rounds in Hollywood film circles is true and that the marriage will be held shortly after her arrival in New York. She will start for the East tonight. But the pretty actress was unwilling to make known any further plans. She merely smiled and said she preferred to wait until seeing her fiance before making any other announcement.

Mr. Neilan is now in New York.

4 HOMELESS WHEN MOTHER VANISHES

Worcester, June 5—Four children, the eldest fourteen, the youngest nine years old, are waiting at the Spencer Town Farm for the return of their mother, Mrs. Rose Frigon, formerly of No. 106 Washington street this city, who vanished last Thursday night.

The children are Louis, fourteen, Francis, twelve, Rose Alma, eleven and Rea, nine. Their father did not live with their mother. He is William H. Frigon, of No. 728 Main street, Worcester. He is in difficulties himself, having been out of work for two weeks.

Last Thursday, according to the story told by the children, an attorney gave them $2 and told them to go to Spencer, where they formerly lived and there wait for their mother. They had been told to wait near the Spencer Town Hall. They say they obeyed orders and waited until eight o'clock in the evening. A former neighbor finally took them in for the night, when their mother failed to arrive. Nothing has been heard from her since. The children did not know where their father lives.

The wager was for $1,000, stipulation being made at the time that the winner should turn over her own check and the thousand she won to the baby.

The money is now on deposit in a Los Angeles bank drawing interest for the future movie star.

DEDICATE SOUTH BOSTON WALK TO WAR HERO

(Photos on Picture Page.)

Carraher Walk, named in memory of Ernest Carraher, South Boston boy of the 101st Regiment who died at Verdun, was dedicated in the presence of 25,000 persons.

While two sisters of the dead soldier stood with bowed heads, a wreath was placed on the guide post at the head of the walk which extends to the pier back of the Head House.

City Councillors Francis J. W. Ford and George Gilbody, together with a number of prominent South Boston business men, marched in the parade, led by Judge Edward L. Logan.

"Boots" was the affectionate nickname by which the dead hero was known to his pals. Survivors of the hard hit company in which he served overseas followed Judge Logan in the line of march. Daniel Lynn, was the only speaker. Tears gathered in the eyes of the Carraher sisters as all stood at attention during the singing of "The Vacant Chair."

GUTERMAN FOR AMERICAN'S 'L' BILL

The following indorsement of the Boston American's bill for public ownership of the Elevated Street Railway system as the surest and quickest way to obtain a 5-cent fare, was written by Attorney Harry N. Guterman, former special Assistant Attorney-General and counsel for the Commission on Necessaries of Life. Mr. Guterman also served as assistant to Professor Frank Parsons, eminent sociologist and economist and head of the National Municipal Ownership League.

H. N. Guterman.

By HARRY N. GUTERMAN.

We can have no assurance of permanently cheap transportation except through public or municipal ownership.

I see that the Boston American has had introduced in the Legislature a bill for immediate purchase of the Boston Elevated System by the public.

Public ownership of the street railway system is the only solution of our local transportation problem. Every citizen should watch carefully the progress of this measure through the Legislature. Relief from the present condition depends primarily upon the interest exhibited by the "strap-hanger."

When poor management and hard times made it apparent that the Boston Elevated could no longer function under private management the present "stop-gap" public control bill was enacted. With monies raised by taxation and through the imposition of a fare unit larger than that of any other great city, the Boston Elevated system has in part been rehabilitated.

The partial control of the Elevated system by public trustees is itself an argument for public ownership. Now that we have, at public expense, obtained the beginnings of a proper street railway system shall we return it to private ownership or leave it in its present status of being neither fish nor fowl, or shall we have the courage to take the next step—full ownership by and operation for the benefit of the people of Boston?

Many countries in Europe own their entire transportation systems. Several cities in the United States own their own street railway systems. Wherever public ownership has been tried, though it has been attacked by the conservatives and reactionaries, it has never been abandoned. That is the greatest proof of its practicability.

Public ownership is attacked on the ground that the people cannot be trusted to choose competent representatives to manage its affairs. My answer to that is simply that so long as the matters of vital importance are kept from the people's control they will be apathetic in the exercise of their public privileges.

But as soon as their immediate life is tied to the government, so soon will they become careful and conscientious in the exercise of their political franchises. And if it should happen that in their education they make costly mistakes, so be it. They pay the bills.

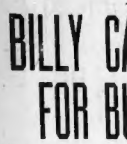
PETE HOBIN, EUROPEAN WELTERWEIGHT CHAMP, REAL HITTER

BILLY CARNEY BILLED FOR BUSY SESSION

By JACK CONWAY

Pete Hobin, European welterweight champion, says he will give a real exhibition of punching when he takes on Billy Carney of New Bedford in one of the ten-round battles at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building, Tuesday night. As the Belgian has walloped out eleven victories since he invaded the United States, there is reason to believe he will keep right on winning.



Johnny Clinton.

Leo Flynn manages Hobin. Leo also manages a regiment or so of other boxers. Years spent in the inner circles of the boxing game have calloused Leo's enthusiasm. He doesn't get oratorical about the ordinary type of fighter any more.

Speaking of Hobin though, Flynn apparently forgot he was supposed to be a ring pessimist and spoke as follows:

"Don't fail to see this bird Hobin. He's the greatest welterweight in the world. He can outpunch any man of his weight and inches in the business. He's won eleven bouts since coming to the United States.

"And he'll keep right on winning. He'll punch his way to wins over the toughest of opposition. Remember how Ted Lewis used to hit 'em when he was at his best? Well, Lewis' best wallop was only a flea bite compared with Hobin's sting."

Flynn's remarks didn't disturb Carney, who figures he will batter out a victory. He plans to keep forcing the issue every second he's in the ring and figures he will be out front when the final blow goes whizzing through the well-known ozone.

Tommy Noble Will Show Some Classy Boxing

Tommy Noble, British featherweight champion and holder of the Lord Lonsdale belt, will display a little of the stuff made famous by Jem Driscoll and Owen Moran when he bumps into Mickey Travers of New Haven in another ten-round bout. Travers shows against Ed Chapman in a twilight show at Banger tonight, but he'll be here in ample time to entertain Noble.

Irish Johnny Curtin Packs a Regular Punch

Irish Johnny Curtin of New York, who whirls forth with Abe Friedman in the final bout, packs a sweet sock in his right. He has been particularly successful in his contests with New England fighters. He flattened Bobby Dyson twice, while he won decisions over Terry Martin, Abe Friedman and Chick Suggs.

Fall River business men have offered to back Curtin up to $50,000 for a tussle with Johnny Kilbane.

Curtin and Friedman have battled three times. Each has a decision to his credit, while the third meeting ended with honors even.

Pete Hartley Will Be Back In Our Midst

Pete Hartley of New York, who always showed to advantage in Boston rings, will go against Johnny Clinton, New England lightweight champion, in the fourth ten-pound affair. This should be a rugged mill.

Secretary Ivey Lewis says popular prices has resulted in a heavy demand for reservations at the Armory Club's office at No. 61 Court street.

Jackie Williams Used Rather Harsh Language

Jackie Williams, manager of Tommy Leahy, didn't mince any words in referring to the fighting qualities of Tobey Doherty of Worcester.

"Just a bum," said Williams. "And I've a dozen prelim boys in my stable who can beat him. The nerve of such a boob challenging Tommy Leahy, a real fighter and the next lightweight champion of New England."

GIRL ATHLETE IN FOREIGN MEET

Dorothy Bough.

Miss Dorothy Bough of Philadelphia, a student at Temple University, will go to Brussels, Belgium, to participate in the women's athletic carnival there.

Miss Bough, unhampered by the customary heavy bloomers, has accepted the usual track uniform worn by men, and has on several occasions ran the 100-yard dash in 12 1-5 seconds, just 1-5 behind the record.

Giants Ask Waivers on Pitcher Pat Shea

New York, June 5.—Waivers have been asked by the New York Giants on Pitcher Pat Shea, the young right-hander who was knocked out of the box by the Braves in Boston Friday. The youth, who hails from New Erin England, has been with the Giants for a couple of seasons. He was acquired from Toronto, where he made a big reputation under Hugh Duffy, Red Sox manager. His trial with the Giants was his second in the big show.

RED SOX MOVE TO ST. LOUIS TODAY

Washington, June 5.—After nosing out the Senators yesterday afternoon, 3 to 1, in a desperately fought battle, the Red Sox hustled down to the 7 o'clock train for St. Louis.

A crowd of 15,000 witnessed the game and everybody took the defeat hard, especially as Cleveland won and knocked the Griffs out of third place in the pennant race.

To the splendid pitching of Ferguson can be ascribed the Red Sox victory although his sensational support played a very important part.

The young pitcher had the better of the argument with Walter Johnson by just one hit, but the bingles garnered off the Red Sox twirler were for the most part of the scratchy order, while those off the Kansas City cyclone were of the rifling order and went through the infield like rifle shots.

Back of Ferguson the fielders did their work with machine-like precision and in addition John Collins pulled down a long fly from Judge's bat, backed against the fence bumped in the air and caught the ball with one hand. Judge would have reached third easily had the ball been missed as he was almost at second when it was caught.

Then a few minutes later Earl Smith caught one on the nose and sent the ball into right center that Liebold gathered in, but a few inches from the score board.

Had either ball gone safe it is safe to assert that the score would have been tied up. It more weren't added.

The spectators had to forget their partisanship and applaud both catches vociferously.

SHEA, CAMBRIDGE LATIN STAR, TO ENTER EXETER

Chic Shea, one of the many brilliant, all-around athletes developed at Cambridge Latin during the past four years, expects to enter Exeter this Fall. Chic was a member of the championship hockey and baseball teams of '22. He was also eligible during the greater part of the present school term, but managed to get into the final hockey games. After the hockey season he entered Westbrook Seminary with John McGowan, another former Latin star.

TENDLER BOUT WITH BARRETT TONIGHT

Philadelphia, June 5.—This will be a big night for the Quaker City fight fans as well as for hundreds of boxing lovers from New York and other near by cities unless rain again makes necessary a postponement of the bout between Bobby Barrett, a well topped youngster, and Lew Tendler of the Quaker City.

Lew Tendler.

The bout will bring into the ring a youth pronounced by many veteran ring followers as a champion in the making. Barrett steadily fought his way up the ladder to a meeting with the leading title contenders.

In Tendler he will meet a crafty ring general, who has also a long string of victories to his credit. But Tendler does not carry a hefty punch if boxing circles will be believed.

The bout is scheduled for eight rounds and will be staged in the National League baseball park.

The measurements of Tendler and Barrett are as follows:

TENDLER		BARRETT

FRANKIE JEROME FIGHTS TERRY MARTIN SATURDAY

New York, June 5.—After wrangling for two weeks, Manager Jess McMahon of the Commonwealth Club and Billy Gibson, manager of Frankie Jerome, signed articles for a ten-round bout between Jerome and Terry Martin, the Providence bantamweight, at the above club on Saturday night. Martin is the lad who recently floored Danny Lee twice in a bout at Providence, and the same lad who fought Joe Lynch two weeks ago.

Prompted by the success that attended his first triple event of the season last week, Jess McMahon will offer a similar set of bouts, with the Jerome-Martin event topping the bill. Johnny "Red" Monroe and Johnny Cooney are paired in another ten-round setto, and Irving Cool, Pal Moore and Kid C. U. star, meets Willie Davis, which will round out the triple event in the third ten-rounder.

BOSTON Y. M. C. A. HAS A GAME WITH SWIFT CO.

The Boston Y. M. C. A. baseball team, which now has a run of eight straight games to its credit, will tackle the Swift Company nine tomorrow, and on Thursday is scheduled to meet the Filene team in the second game of a series.

A few open dates will remain in the "Y" schedule, which is rapidly nearing completion. Games are desired with town or representative nines, and may be arranged by addressing Baseball Director, at the Y. M. C. A., or calling Back Bay 4400.

EAST AND WEST EVEN IN TRACK ATHLETICS

New York, June 5.—This year's crop of college athletes of the East and of the West are of about equal ability when all-around track and field teams are considered, one side of the continent being superior in several departments and the other enjoying the ascendency in the remaining events.

If teams were selected of the best men of each section, using the marks made by eastern spike shoe wearers in the intercollegiate games at Cambridge a week ago and the figures established by Western Conference men in their annual tournament at Iowa City on Saturday, the total points of each would be extremely close.

This is true despite the fact that the University of California men came all the way across the continent and won the intercollegiate games, for that victory was the result of a preponderance of second-best and third-best men and not the fruit of victories in a majority of the contests. California and Stanford together won only three of the fifteen events, but their men who finished from second to fifth accumulated the winning total.

Comparing event to event the West is superior in four of the track features, while the East leads in three, the same proportion existing in the field events, which, if alone considered, gives the men west of the Alleghenies a slight edge. But this is discounted if the parallel is made in departments, the East holding this year's high marks in three and the West in two? one department being even.

One phase of the comparison will spoil it for some experts, and that is the tracks on which the two events were held. The Harvard track at Cambridge can be compared only to the University of Pennsylvania oval at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, recognized as the best in the country, while the field at Iowa City is not near so good. This phase, however, is not of considerable importance in the field events. The Easterners this year, moreover, were handicapped by chill winds.

That athletes all over the country are becoming faster and better is disclosed in the records of each of these tournaments. At Harvard three intercollegiate records were broken and at Iowa City four conference marks were lowered. The University of Illinois, winner of the latter, was more superior to its opponents than was California to Eastern rivals. In each event veterans of last year bowed to the youths of this.

CARPENTIER TO GO ON STAGE

Paris, June 5.—Georges Carpentier, French Apollo of the prize ring, will go on the stage. He has already accepted an offer to go into the movies, but that only inspired an ambition for the legitimate, as Georges will grace the boards. Georges will star in a play written exclusively for him by Yves Mirandon. It is a sentimental love story with a boxing game as a background.

Georges Carpentier.

Georges is the hero. The identity of the villain is not known, but it is revealed already that he will not have a look-in.

BABE RUTH AMONG SAND LOTTERS

Alfred Brennan shoo ristop and field general of the Concord A. C., has his eye out for a big league berth. Alfred, who is only 12, also swings a wicked willow and numbers among the leading batters of his team, in fact the other youngsters hail him as the Babe Ruth of Lincoln Park, Somerville.

Alfred Brennan.

The Concord A. C. has already played twenty-two games this season, losing only four times. This is a good record for a lot of young schoolboy players.

EUROPEANS NOT SO FAST IN WATER

Particular interest among followers of swimming has been attracted to the international water carnivals held in Brussels and Monte Carlo.

The results indicate that European swimmers, as a class, have not kept pace with the remarkable progress made in this country since the Olympic Games at Antwerp in 1920.

Germany and Austria had no contestants at either meet, and Great Britain did not send is foremost mermaids to the Monte Carlo fixture.

MURPHY IN LEAD AS HARD HITTER

Emerson Murphy, the Newton High star center fielder made eight hits in as many times at the bat last week which is the best batting feat that has been turned in this season.

Emerson Murphy

One of these knocks was a homer, the longest that has been seen at Russell Field in years. As a defence player he is without a peer and is the logical candidate for the centerfield position on the All-Scholastic team.

When he first joined Newton, Murphy tried his hand at pitching. He was successful at this stage of the game but because of his tremendous power with the bat, Coach Dickinson thought it best that his feaures be displayed in all Newton games, hence his playing in the outfield.

YALE CREW OFF FOR THE THAMES TRAINING CAMP

Yale oarsmen will leave today for their training camp on the banks of the Thames depressed by the loss of all their preliminary races, but clinging to the recollection of the feat of the varsity crew which last year led Harvard to a four-mile finish after also losing its early season events and after a change of head coaches had been made on the eve of the departure from New Haven.

SENATORS NOW HAVE AN INDIAN ON THEIR ROLL

Addition of an Indian to the roster of the Senators is announced by Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club. The newcomer is Albert Youngblood, obtained from the Greenville club, of the Texas-Oklahoma League.

Jesse Guilford has decided to tee off in the National Lumberman golf tournament at Westchester-Biltmore, Rye, N. Y., on June 13.

CARDINALS FEAR THE CLIMBING BRAVES

By NICK FLATLEY.

Boston fans will flock to Braves Field this week. They have become deeply interested in the baseball team that Fred Mitchell has performing up that way. Three straight socks at the Giants have convinced the local populace that the Braves are a real ball club after all, and the boys are now hopeful for one of those sudden and glorious spurts toward the roof and glory.

The fanatics were all ready to support the team wildly in the spring, but the outfit blew wide open, and was quickly stranded in last place. Now that the change has finally come, the Mitchmen will discover that the gang will be with them strongly all the way, provided the boys play good ball.

There's every indication that they will, too. All three of those Giants' games were snatched out by hard fighting against the best baseball combination the game has seen in a few years. The Giants have class, but they couldn't make it snow against the aggressiveness of the Wigwamers.

CARDINALS OPEN TODAY.

The St. Louis Cardinals open the western invasion today, and are followed in by the Pittsburgh Pirates, so the Braves get the big test stacked up against the best clubs in the league. Which is just what they want, to show the home folks something.

Those Rickeys remain for four games, and will try to grab 'em all, as the Braves torpedoed them four in a row out in the West, and knocked the team out of a chance to step into first place. The Pirates now have taken over the job of trailing the Giants, and could have assimilated the roof by a victory Saturday, so close are they.

In Pittsburgh, the Braves broke even in a quartet, and it took a couple of lucky last inning homers by Somerville Pie Traynor to prevent a clean sweep there, also.

Today's Dope.

Braves to beat St. Louis Cardinals at Braves Field.

The revolution against the Giants has been the best thing that could have happened to the Mitchmen, who previously had only beaten the New Yorkers once in nine starts. They have knocked off the biggest obstacles, so now everything else looks soft.

Pitching was the answer to all the early Brave troubles. The Tribe had good flinging against the McGraw's and constantly came through. Fillingim, Miller and McQuillan all turned in fine games, and Hughie undoubtedly would have gone through to glory Saturday had not Groh's shot at his pitching arm took away all his stuff.

BIG JOE WILL OPEN.

Big Joe Oeschger has come back to form, and has won two of his last three assays. Accordingly he is back on his regular assignment for opening series, and will be in there today against the Cards.

The whole team, though minus three regulars, Kopf, Southworth and Powell, played steadily brilliant ball against the champions, making but one error in three conflicts, and that one didn't count. Hits haven't been numerous, but they have been arriving in the most critical spots, which is a whole lot better.

LYNN ENGLISH CHALLENGES NEWTON FOR THE STATE TITLE

COACH SAYS IT'S UP TO THE PLAYERS

By FRED C. LANE.

"It's all up to the boys," said Coach Allie Dickinson of Newton High when informed over the telephone that Lynn English, champions of the North Shore League, had challenged Newton for a post-season game on which the Massachusetts championship would rest.

"The fight in the Suburban League has been the hardest in years. With each school represented by a fast team, the title in the Suburban League was not easily won.

"College entrance examinations are coming next week and will be a handicap on the youngsters, should such a game be arranged, but should they feel that they can play the game, we are ready."

Newton Coach Wants Game Played on Neutral Grounds

When informed that Coach Belton of Lynn English, who issued the challenge, was willing to play the game at Newton at any time, Dickinson replied: "There is nothing unsportsmanlike about Newton teams; we would never consider playing this game on our home grounds. If such a game matures, it will be played on neutral territory."

It must be said in justice to both teams that they have played the best scholastic baseball this year, barring none. Lynn has yet to lose a game. They have a very fast infield, one that is second to none. The outfield is of high caliber and well up with the leaders for stick work.

Would Be Finest School Battle of Recent Years

Almost the same story can be told of Newton. It has been the heavy stick work of the players, coupled with fine twirling, that has caused them to rest on top of the Suburban League ladder.

This contest should be the best between scholastic teams in years. Cambridge Latin had a wonder team last season, but so far out classed its rivals in post-season contests that interest was less because of the one-sided scores.

Watertown Should Get McDonald Without Trouble

It's not going to take much coaxing on the part of the Watertown school authorities to win back the services of John McDonald, now tutoring sports at Malden High. With all his ability as a coach and leader, McDonald is finding it hard to keep the Malden lads within bounds

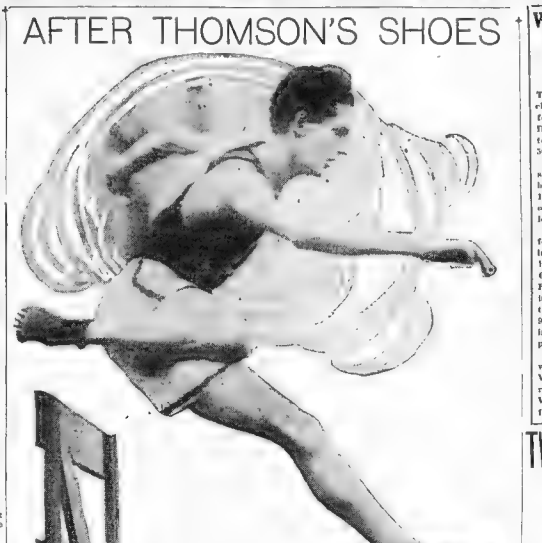
Snappy Playing a Big Hit With the Fans

Baseball fans are heartily in favor of snappy playing, and that is one of the reasons the crowd is pulling for the Braves just now. The three New York games were run off in 1 33, 1:49, and 1:37, which positively established a record for the year.

The Braves, before they went West were dragging along into two hours almost daily, and the Red Sox came home and kept it going the same way. And it didn't help to enthuse anybody in the least.

Teams that are really hustling waste no time getting in and out as rapidly as possible. It helps the game mightily.

AFTER THOMSON'S SHOES



ARNOLD RUMPF

Arnold Rumpf, Commerce hurdle star, is picked by close followers of scholastic sports as being the one lad in scholastic ranks who will fill the shoes of Karl Thomson in a few years. This lad has come fast under the tutelage of Coach Skip Sherlock of Commerce High, having won first place in all athletic meets during the outdoor season.

Woodward Claims a World's Record in Shooting

F. F. Woodward of Houston, Texas, has established what is claimed to be a world's record for shooting doubles targets. During the Mississippi State tournament he broke 99 out of 50 pairs

Breaking 99 out of a 100 at singles targets is quite a feat, but Woodward broke 99 out of 100 shooting at two at a time, one to the right and one to the left.

Woodward is in excellent form this year. Prior to shooting in the Mississippi event he broke 96 out of 50 pairs at Clarksdale, Miss. Last year Fred King of Delta, Col., shooting against Fred Riehen for the Hazard Trophy, broke 99 of the first 50 pairs and 96 in the second, or 195 out of 100 pairs.

However, King's targets were not registered, while Woodward's were. For this reason it is expected that Woodward will be given credit for the record.

Daniel Leahy, pride of the sporting fans at North Cambridge, will have to hustle his scrappy little baseball team over to Lincoln Park tonight, where they will do battle with St. Joseph's Catholic Association of Somerville.

The North Cambridge Knights of Columbus followers are a proud lot of folks with their team up on top of the ladder in the Boston Twilight League. St. Joe's, of course, are at the present time down in the second division but with their lineup somewhat unified about, one can always look for trouble.

The other game which is on the schedule for this late afternoon baseball racket is booked between the Reading Town Team and the St. Andrew's Catholic Club of Forest Hills district.

Although King Bader has been announced to go on the hill for the Saints, one doubts if very much, as on tomorrow evening he will be needed in the Dorchester game at Ronan Park.

GUILFORD AMAZES THE NASHUA GOLFERS

By F. G. THAYER

Here is what Jesse Guilford did yesterday at Nashua's delightful and difficult course. In company with W. H. Webster, Jr. against the best ball of Bert Nichols and Woodie Allen he shot 72 and 74, at the same time exhibiting to the local club members a few of his coterie of long tee shots, sweet run-ups and true putting touches seldom executed by any other pro or amateur in the land.

Nichols was not bad with a 77 and 76, hitting most of his irons and tee shots far down the middle and close to the pins. In the afternoon, at the 540 yard fifteenth, Guilford's tee shot was hole high with the right hand corner of the green and years on the 440 yard eighteenth he had but a seventy five yard chip to place his ball within three feet of the cup. The "Sleepy Gun" swings back far and is hitting harder than ever.

* * *

A busy time for the men and women golfers of the State is assured during the present week. In the Women's Eastern Championship considerable national interest is being shown in the outcome because of the fact that Alexa Stirling has returned to regain her lost laurels and at the present time is shooting good golf and proving that her form and standard of play has not deteriorated as result of being out of competition during the last year

* * *

Another national woman golfer who is sure to be a national amateur champion, and perhaps this year, is the young Providence expert, Miss Glenna Collett and her performance in the Eastern will be a good barometer of how she squares up with the former champions.

* * *

M. G. A. golfers have two open events which they should take in if possible because Oakley is in a good condition as could be expected and Longmeadow is now on the Bay State schedule and is a tough arrangement for those golfers who underrate the nine-hole courses. There is plenty of opportunity on the remodelled circuit in Tewksbury to bring out the best in one's game and any score within a few strokes of 80 is good on these links.

* * *

In Wednesday's medal play tournament at Oakley, there are two gross and two net trophies. Also of folks with their team up on top of the three match play divisions will receive worthy pieces of silverware. Telephone Belmont 1074 for starting time for Oakley always draws a large crowd. The committee also announces a mixed foursomes for the 15th of June. Put it down in your calendar

* * *

Richard Verzone and Roy M Fay, the treasurer of the Marlborough Country Club, won the gross prizes on the opening day, their hospitality being the best yet shown in the 19th hole festivities in the State golf functions. Mayor Curley's speech was very appropriate to the occasion and his remarks were a high tribute to the initial success of the Black & White Club's post mansion. Monsieur Verzone The delicious trout menu was a most delightful climax to the day's festivity

* * *

The nine holes opened up Saturday are not as finished golfing grounds yet, by any means, but open shots are the short time of any star in which Wayne Stiles has had to produce this attractive bit of golf architecture, the generous proportion of the fairways and greens is found to be wonderful.

The far and long individual hole lay outs are to be considered, the designer is to be congratulated for his technical skill in creating such difficult and attractive golfing combinations as each hole represents.

To not be fooled on the distance when you play Marlborough, for they are genuine, if the card says so. Secondly, the shots must be played true to the lines of the fairways or severe penalties will be the result

* * *

The greens are all very fair in their contour, and will in time be so shaped as to call for only the lightest kind of approaches. They are also sufficiently well guarded with brooks and bunkers to preclude the likelihood of flukes shots being successful.

* * *

The New England pros will have an amateur pro best ball at Needham on June 26, and it is a safe bet to say the pros of the local line up will be assistant to Jim Hewitt, and not disturbed. Guilford picked it yesterday, but he was shooting some mighty good golf getting a four on the long 555-yard 5th. The New Hampshire State championship will also be held at Nashua, July 28, and three-time State Champion Larry Dowling and runner up B. K. Nettel will be there to repeat

* * *

Richard Verzone is not the president of the Marlborough Golf Club, but the president of the Black & White Corporation which owns the land and property and leases it to the club. At any rate he sure looks far ahead and some day the Marlborough Country Club will be second to none in its golfy atmosphere and scenic beauty. Watch them grow

MORVICH TO GO IN $50,000 SPECIAL

Louisville, Ky., June 5.—Colonel Matt J. Winn, manager of the Kentucky race courses, is confident that the $50 000 Latonia Special in which Morvich, winner of the Kentucky Derby, will again be seen under silks, will be run on June 24.

Colonel Winn announced that he has positive assurance from Benjamin Block that Morvich would be a starter and the word of James Rowe that the best of the Whitney stable would go.

In addition to these it is likely that Kai Sang, from the Sinclair barn, Snob, from the John Sanford string, Lucky Hour and My Play, from the Simms barn; Hea, owned by Admiral Grayson, and possibly one or two colors from the East would be here.

It is certain that E. R. Bradley will have a starter and Doublock is likely to be in the big race. It looks assured now that eight horses will go to the post in the race.

Mr. Winn will spend the greater part of his time during the final two weeks of the Latonia meeting an endeavor to find suitable space for the great throng which is certain to be here.

He confidently believes that the race will even outrank the Kentucky Derby in interest and importance, James Rowe told him that he would ship eight horses to Latonia June 8

The Latonia Derby will be run one week later and nearly the same field will go to the post in this event.

Entries to the Special will close June 12 A nominal entrance fee of $25 will be charged, $500 additional to start.

CALZA IN BIG MAT BOUT AT GRAND

The wrestling fans of Greater Boston will be glad to hear that George Calza, the Italian champion, will be back at the Grand Opera House as the main attraction on Thursday night, to act as all star wrestling show staged by the Howard theatre management

His opponent will be Hal Christensen, the Danish heavy weight champion, and the match will be two falls in three to a positive finish Hal Cristensen is not a stranger to Boston mat fans, as he appeared here twice this season, one time beating Cyclone Rees and another time beating Young Olson, the Swedish heavyweight. He made a good impression here and has shown the fans that he possesses real class as a wrestler. This will be a real try out for Calza and he will have to be in top form to escape defeat

Orsatti Vadalli, who is out with a challenge to both Calza and Gardini, will meet Frank Frisbeorn a German heavyweight, in the semi final one fall to a finish

The curtain raiser will bring together Joe Pepelli, the Italian Wildman of Manchester, N. H., and Billy Klein of Worcester

The advance sale of tickets will be conducted at the Howard theatre box office

GOLD CUP RACE IS ROWING FEATURE

Philadelphia, June 5.—The challenger for the Pennsylvania Gold Cup, held by Jack Kelly amateur single sculling champion of the world, were on the Schuylkill River early today for a final workout in preparation for the race, scheduled to start at 11 a. m. The city was overcrast

Two of the entrants Walter Hoover, of Duluth, national amateur champion and Hilton Belyea, Canadian title holder, are entered in the English Henley regatta to be rowed on the Thames July 5, and Hoover has booked passage to sail on the Mauretania from New York tomorrow Both have declared however, that they would not go to England if they were defeated in the challenge cup race.

Hoover and Belyea, as well as Paul V Costello and W. J. Garrett Gilmore, their opponents in today's race, rowed over the mile and a quarter course yesterday, and all planned another brief practice this morning.

LEWIS FAVORED TO WIN OVER CADDOCK

The winner of the Lewis-Caddock championship match at the Arena on Wednesday night will be a busy wrestler if only he accepts a few of the many challenges already issued to him, and although all indications point to the success of Lewis, the strangler, there is no doubt that Caddock has a chance to win and win decisively

Should Lewis come through and retain his title it would put a damper on the ardor of many of the challengers, but if events should so shape themselves that Caddock recovers his lost crown it would mean a renewal of the hope of several who feel that they would be able to defeat Caddock, but who, down deep in their hearts, acknowledge Lewis as the master

It is the element of uncertainty that makes a contest Caddock, by his superlative science has won over Sickert, Whalen Zbyszko and Londos, scored falls on Stan Zbyszko and has generally proved that he is dangerous against anybody living

Caddock Will Not Be Handicapped as in West

Caddock will come to the mat Wednesday night feeling that with pin falls only to count and the contest to go to a positive finish with out time limit of any kind, he will not be handicapped as he was in Western cities where legal restrictions prevented a contest of more than two hours' duration.

That is one of the strong points on which he is basing to come through Whether this hope will be fulfilled or not will be decided by the contest itself

Lewis, always an optimist as to his chances cannot see how he can be beaten by Caddock, yet he is certainly expecting a hard battle, as is shown by the hearty manner in which he is preparing for the fray

If he has a lapse of any kind Caddock will surely get him, for there has never been a wrestler of any weight who was quicker and more determined in taking advantage of the slips of an opponent than that same young Caddock

The initial appearance here of John Pesek against such a sterling performer as Dick Daviscourt means that their number will bring together two of the finest and most aggressive men of their weight in the game today.

Pesek, in spite of the adverse propaganda is a singularly fine performer of a style that is the height of sensationalism. He is a running, forceful fellow, with a fine record and one of the fastest big men ever seen on a mat anywhere.

Daviscourt has proved his ability for even in defeat he showed stuff enough to warrant the belief that he is in line for the World's championship.

A short curtain raiser will open the show.

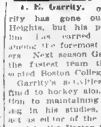
Columbia Crew to Use New Shell in Race

Columbia University's varsity crew will sit in a brand new shell when it rows at Poughkeepsie, if Coach Jim Rice's plans do not go askew. The Morningside rowing tutor learned the other day that the sophomores, the class of 1924, had a new shell built for use in a regatta on the Harlem River. Not being entirely satisfied with the Bogue, the present varsity shell, Rice asked the sophomore class to lend him its boat, and the undergraduates promptly agreed to do so.

The shell is ready now, and Rice will give it a trial before the Poughkeepsie race. If it is not too stiff and rides well, the new craft will probably be used on the Hudson.

NEW B. C. HONORS FOR GARRITY

In the election of officers of the Boston College Athletic Association, the B. C. students expressed their appreciation of the sophomore class to lend him its boat, and the undergraduates promptly agreed to do so.



A. E. Garrity, only sport Garrity has gone out for at the Heights, but his playing in that line has earned him a place among the foremost college athletes. Next season Garrity will head the fastest team that has represented Boston College on the gridiron. Garrity's activities are not confined to hockey alone, and in addition to maintaining a high standing in his studies, finds time to act as editor of the athletic department in the Boston College Stylus

Souls for Sale

RUPERT HUGHES' GREATEST NOVEL

THE STORY SO FAR

DESTINY had dealt savagely with beautiful young Remember Steddon, daughter of a Massachusetts clergyman. She had given her love to Elwood Farnaby, with whom she sang in the choir but he was unable to marry her, being the sole support of his drunken father's large family. Dr. Bretherick discovers there is reason for a marriage, but while he is urging this on the girl Elwood is fatally injured in an automobile accident. Elwood dies and Dr. Bretherick fixes up a yarn to tell Remember's parents. She goes to California by his advice and meets prominent movie people on the train. The train is nearly wrecked by an accident to the locomotive and has to stop in the desert. There Mem gets acquainted with Tom Holby, a movie star. She is met at Tucson by Dr. Galbraith. She writes her parents that she has married "Mr Woodville. She hears of a lot at Palm Springs and finds a way to get rid of her "husband."

THE voices died in a clatter of plates and knives and forks. There was meaningless and thwarted ambition everywhere, evidently.

Mem had never heard of Palm Springs, but she was looking for just such a place. And a ranch! She had always wanted to see a ranch.

The best here was like a madness upon her, but most of all she abhorred the eternal facing of questions. Mrs. Sloat was a nuisance, a menace. Writing letters home and getting letters from home had become an intolerable burden on her soul.

She wanted to get away from everybody that had ever known her. She wanted to find some deep dark cave. She was the grey already of the instinct that Doctor Brethærick had spoken of, the instinct to crawl away and hide during the long, ugly chaos ahead of her and the fearful climax at the end of it.

There was a blaze of mutiny in her heart against the whole business of her life. She understood why Bodlin's overloaded, overdriven burro had kicked off its pack and bolted. This pack of lies that she was carrying and adding to at every step was bound to crush her sooner or later. Why be a burro for other people's burdens? It would profit her none. What reward could she hope for?

Into Hysterics

Heat and fatigue whipped her into hysteria. Her soul vomited up all the precepts it had been fed upon. She found energy enough for one last desperate letter home. Then she would declare her soul bankrupt and face the world free of responsibilities to the past.

Darling Mamma and Papa,—By now you have probably ceased to be surprised at anything I do. You'll think I've gone clean crazy and I guess I have, but as long as I'm getting better and happier every day you won't mind.

I've been too busy to write all about John as I promised. He is out here scouting for a famous mine and is going prospecting for it right away. It is a famous lost mine that got abandoned on account of some old Indian curse. It was nearly forgotten. So he's on the hunt for it and we're going out to hunt for it myself. It means leaving ourselves in the desert and the mountains for a long while—there's no telling how long—but it will be terribly romantic and fine for my health and when next you hear from me I may be so rich I'll send you a solid gold sewing machine, mamma, and papa a solid gold pulpit.

There's no mail delivery where we're going and no way of reaching us, but don't worry. If anything happens I'll let you know. If you don't hear from me for a long while you'll know everything's all right. You can send your letters to me here and I'll find them when I get back. Don't send me any more money.

So good-by and blessings on your darling heads. John sends his love.

Your loving, loving, loving Mem.

Going to Stay

As she finished the letter she thought grimly of what Mr. Bodlin had said. She was not quite sure just what was going to happen to Mr. Woodville. In her morbid humor and her resentment at her own allotted torture, she had a leaning toward the most pleasurable kind of husband—a death from thirst or a rattlesnake's fangs or a fall down a precipice.

One thing was sure, John Woodville was going into the desert to "stay."

She envied him the calm certainty of his fate. The main solace to her pride in her self-obliteration was the thought that she was going to cease to be a drain on the purse of her poor father. He and her mother had guns through life like two sad dreary burros, carrying their burdens. They should no longer carry hers.

Villages though she was, and used to housework, she had been brought up in a certain pride. To be a chambermaid or a waitress was a dismal come-down, but she must accept it. What right had she to pride?

She would go to Palm Springs and toil humbly as long as she could, and save her wages and present to be a widow. She would go there in mourning and bury her heart in sackcloth and ashes. And perhaps in that thief's crucifixion to which she was carrying her own increasingly heavy cross she would die unknown and be lost to the too many miseries of this world.

And so she fared into the desert to "stay." She went there to find obscurity and concealment, to embrace poverty and humility.

But everything went by contraries, and from that hour she was, to be caught up into a fiery chariot, for all the world to behold as it rolled her round and round the globe on an amazing destiny

Everything that had tortured her and was yet to torture her was a schooling

Lie That Always Prospers

That a lie never prospers is a lie that always prospers. It is discouraging for lovers of the truth to review the innumerable and eternal untruths that are told for the truth's sake.

Mem broke away from Yuma with an unusual economy of falsehood. Her trunk was the only difficulty. She had checked her from Tucson to her boarding house in Yuma, but she could not check it further without giving her destination

After a vast amount of thought Mem decided to ask her landlady to hold her trunk for her until she returned for it. She put into it everything that she could spare. She was going to travel light and forage on the country. There was an old shed in the backyard, and the dry air would serve as the perfect preservation for her belongings in case she ever came back for them. She told the landlady the same story she embodied in her farewell letter home, and asked her to hold any mail that might come. Then she slipped away while Mrs. Sloat was not looking.

As Remember finished the letter, she thought of what Mr. Bodlin had said.

She went to the station with her old suitcase and took the train into the Imperial Valley. To her it was as pathless and mapless and as filled with strange beasts as to the first prospectors. Only, she was not looking for gold or adventure. She was looking for peace. And, like the usual pioneer, she was sure to find almost everything but what she hunted.

Wrong Ticket

In her ignorance Mem bought her ticket to Palm Springs station, instead of to Whitewater, where an auto bus would have met her.

She was a little more accustomed now to the desert, but she took no interest in the miracles that had tamed the wastes of sand and the Salton Sea and put the idle, sterile water to work upon a vast garden; had built enormous dams to impound the stray water, and endless channels to carry it where it was needed when it was needed.

Mem was deposited at the lonely station, and fear smothered her as she watched the train vanish into the glare. But a rancher, almost as shy as she, offered her the hospitality of his wagon. He was rough, unshaven, and unkempt, the very picture of a stage robber. Still she preferred him to the solitude, and he turned out to be almost as silent

He was too timid to ask her questions and she was grateful to him for that. He said that he was going past the Randlee ranch anyhow, and would leave her there. And he said nothing more.

When the ranchman had helped her into his wagon he unhitched the horses and made a dash for the seat. The horses began the journey with a take-off from the ground that hinted at a voyage through the air rather than along the road. Then they settled down to their ordinary gait. Mem would have called it a runaway, but the driver did not even haul in on the lines.

The Mirage

"That's Palm Springs, I suppose," she said.

"No, ma'am, that's a mirage—imaginary mirage. They're nothin' there at tall—no, ma'am."

And now Mem had learned that her own eyes could lie to her with convincing vividness. She wondered if they deceived her when they showed her sagebrush and cripplin' trees bent in rheumatic agonies. She thought she saw Lilliputian alligators scuttering here and there, and some chuckwallas, but she did not dare ask about them.

Suddenly, as the road led them within eyeshot of two vast hills of sand unspotted with vegetation, she saw what she was sure was pure mirage—a scene that must have come from her memory of a picture in an old volume of Bible stories. She would almost have sworn that she looked into the desert of Araby, for she seemed to see a train of camels in trappings, and perched upon their billowy humps, men in the garb of Bedouins.

She rubbed her eyes and scolded them, but they persisted in their story. Having been so perfectly deceived by the equally visible lake and cascade that were not, she did not mention the camels to her host, who gave no sign of wonder

Then the horses seemed to suffer from the same delusion, for they grew panicky and began to buck and back and have the road. The driver yelled at them and tried to force them ahead, but as they drew near the camels they went into hysterics.

In the Ditch

They refused to obey yells or reins or the whiplash or even each other's impulses. But at length their insanities coincided, they slowed in the same direction, carried the wagon into the side ditch, and overturned it.

Mem found herself gently spilled in the soft sand, so little injury that her only thought was for pulling down her skirts.

She lay still, reclining, not in pain, but in wonderment, as the wagon slid on its side, the driver stumbling along and still clinging to the lines as if he tried to hold giant falcons in leash. The caravan grew restive, too, and Mem was consumed with perplexity as she saw one of the animals forced to its knees not far from her. The shock, or whatever it was, tumbled from the saddle and ran to her.

A brown face looked out from the hood, and from the scarlet lips surrounded by a short beard came a voice startlingly un-Arabic.

"Miss Steddon? Miss Remember Steddon!"

She was so dazed that she could only stare into the mysterious face doubly dark against the blinding sun. The Arab smiled and laughed.

"You don't know me? Don't you recall Mr. Woodville?"

This frightened her and confused her unbearably.

"Who are you?" she gasped.

"As a matter of fact, I'm only Mr. Holby, Tom Holby—a common movie actor out on location. But the last time you saw me you called me Mr. Woodville."

"Oh, did I? I was thinking of my husband."

"Your husband!" You were Miss Steddon a week or two ago."

"Yes, but—"

"Oh, I see! You have taken the fatal step since then. Is that Mr. Woodville playing tag with those dancing demons out there?"

"Oh no! He's dead."

"Dead, already! and you only married a few days! Why, what on earth—"

She dropped her head. She could not face the rush of sympathetic horror in those famous eyes. She could not think in the flailing sunbeams pounding her aching head.

Holby read this as grief and sighed.

"You don't want to talk about it, of course. Forgive me. But you can't stay here."

They say that the Magdalen was not really a magdalen—that tradition has forgotten the text and mixed her with a woman of Bethany just as Potiphar's wife is carelessly branded with the deeds of another woman

But Mem, as she cowered on the sand, felt as humble as the Magdalen in the pictures, though the man who looked down upon her so tenderly had never posed as a Galilean even in the Miracle Play they give every Summer in the canon at Hollywood.

Forced a Moral

Tom Holby's profession was the opposite of a preacher's. He tried to show how people actually did behave, not how they ought to. His authors would not let him be very real, but always forced a moral, and that is the true immorality of the morning pictures; not that they present wickedness so that innocent people may imitate it, but that they present life as if it punished wickedness and rewarded virtue; which is a pretty lie, but a lie none the less.

While Holby had an instant suspicion that Mem was not telling him the truth, he felt no call to rebuke her or to wring it from her. His thought: "She's pretty. She's in trouble. My business is to be as nice to her as I can."

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By ANN LISLE

Copyright, 1922 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

SO we marched into the hotel. Undisturbed we crossed the lobby, rang for the elevator and stepped in like any other passengers No one made a move to stop us. Indeed, no one paid any attention to us. We got off at our floor and walked down the corridor to the tower room with a certain solemn expectancy, which quieted even Carlotta's flippancy.

No one answered my knock at the door. It occurred to me that the nurse might be out and Dad Lee asleep so without any particular belief that I'd find the door open, I turned the knob. It gave under my hand and I found myself pushing the door open and starting across the threshold of Dad Lee's room.

The bed was empty. Its white covers were smoothed back immaculately. The whole room was in perfect order. There wasn't a single token that Dad Lee had ever been there But on the bureau and chiffarobe there were brushes and trays of ebony with a silver "M" staring up from the black background.

"This must be the wrong room!" I gasped, stepping back over the threshold of the empty place in which I had expected to find Dad Lee lying bandaged and bruised in the bed where we'd left him the night before.

"It is the right room—all rightin!" said Carlotta with a note of cynicism. "It's Rogers' little den—just as the Stafford boy said "

"May I go in ahead of you, Mrs. Harrison?" requested Lyons respectfully.

At my nod he walked into the room and I followed as he crossed to the window. Looking down, he shook his head and I started back from the sheer descent of brick court the window exposed to view, before he crossed and locked one of the doors. The closets held trim suits of tweed and serge—a young man's wardrobe.

"Now what shall we do?" I asked hopelessly, turning to escape from Mr. Rogers' room without encountering the gentleman himself

"March right down to the desk" urged Carlotta, "and ask for Mr Lee. We'll put up some sort of bluff and find out where this room he's been chanced to. Perhaps you might even try interviewing your friend, Mr. Rogers. I'm sure we can carry this off with a high hand "

"We've nothing to do but try " I said " And there's no special danger about walking up to the desk of a hotel, so there's equally no reason why you should delay starting off on your long drive to meet Mr. Norrys, Lyons. But before you go I want a word with you."

"Before Mrs. Harrison has that word, I'd like to shake hands with you," broke in Carlotta. "And if ever Mr. Norrys stops driving a car or takes to driving his own, I want you to know that I'd go as far as buying an automobile just to keep you in the family."

Got so blue I scarcs knew what to do.	But her home is surely there!

RICH GIRL, POOR GIRL

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

HE and Adelaide were on their way across town. He was driving slowly as if glad of the opportunity for a pleasant chat and unwilling to reach his destination soon.

His companion smiled, then looked grave. "I hope she is more honest than I am," she rejoined "I mean," at his glance of inquiry, "it has not been easy for me to be frank always. I seem to be all the time finding it necessary to suppress something and," in a sudden burst of confidence, "I do not like it."

"You are thinking of the necessity of your playing a part for an ill person's benefit," he commented. "It is hard—as I have told you, and yet one can hardly call that deception—to my way of thinking. If it is, I still insist that it is in a righteous cause. It is preventing acute anguish, and, perhaps, nearing a life. Yet, if it hurts your conscience—why—I do not insist upon it"

"I know you do not," she rejoined. "I feel that I am only doing my duty when I pretend to Mrs. Hollingshead to be somebody besides myself. As you said before, desperate diseases demand desperate remedies. My conscience does not hurt me any more about that part of my work."

"Then it was not of that that you were thinking?"

"The man's tone was interrogative, although his words themselves were not.

"I was thinking of other things," Adelaide answered, as if he had asked a question. "I was thinking how hard it is to be straightforward—about one's self, and one's affairs—and all that."

"Perhaps you are super-sensitive in such matters," the physician suggested. "One's affairs are one's own—and one is not compelled to tell anyone of them. Unless," he amended, "it is a person to whom one is bound by—"

He hesitated.

"By what?"

"By love or honor, I was going to say," he continued. "Yet that is a rather misleading statement. What I mean is that, for my own part, I would find it almost impossible to lie to or deceive anyone I loved, or who loved me and trusted me. That," with a little laugh, "is one of the things no man should do."

She did not reply "Who loved me or whom I loved!" Then if she went by that standard she was not doing anything wrong in concealing the fact that she had sung in a cabaret of doubtful reputation It was right that her employer should know it, since he paid her for attending his wife. That might be called one of the times when honor demanded frankness.

DAILY SHORT STORY--HAPPILY WEDDED

By Neva Finley Vernes

"DO you know, Margie, brook still raves about your ideal marriage?" wrote Sylvia Wain. "To be frank, you and Herbert are the only happily married pair I know. Lottie and Ralph are having trouble again, and so forth."

Marjorie Blake slipped the fat, newsy letter into her bungalow apron pocket, mopped her perspiring forehead and reluctantly resumed her dusting. Happily married! Was she?

It had been months since they had been to a dance or party.

"We should go out more, Margie," remarked Herbert from the depths of his newspaper.

"But I have no clothes, no new ones," Margie had protested, as she tucked Junior in bed.

Later they attended the Palmerson dinner. She would never forget her humiliation

Her husband was in evening clothes Indeed, he was debonair and attractive to an exasperating degree.

He had sacrificed nothing, not even his clothes, since she was expected to slave and economize. She spent a miserable evening at the Palmersons. The guests eyed her critically. How could she carry herself with ease in a gown two years old?

It was dusk when Margie finished her cleaning. Herbert was dining at the club. Sinking exhausted on the divan, she gazed wistfully out.

Wearily she answered the doorbell A new business suit had arrived for her husband.

"From now on it will be fifty-fifty in this household!" she cried crisply. "I'm sick of this ghastly pinching and economizing!"

The next morning she sallied forth in quest of a beauty parlor. After a refreshing massage, manicure and becoming hair bob, she felt vastly better, for already she was younger and prettier, the old Margie of two years ago. With her head held high, she stepped into the velvet carpeted salon of a smart and exclusive woman's shop.

From sheer desperation, she let them show her things, the prettiest and most expensive.

"I ordered tickets for the theatre this evening," she remarked calmly, as she served dinner.

"Glad you thought of it," smiled Herbert. "We should go out more."

"What, a new dress!" he cried in astonishment, as his wife appeared in a clinging mauve satin.

"Beautiful, isn't it, but frightfully expensive. Of course, I must look my best when we go out together. In your position I'm obliged to."

Herbert forced a weak grin.

"You look stunning, but then you look great in anything," he cried with the faintest of swaggers.

She was opening gratitude in the lobby of the theatre, and her husband could not ignore it. Judge Hedges, an old business friend, flattered her admiringly.

"I think we'd better make arrangements to have you and your husband with Junior and look after the house," remarked Herbert the next evening "You're pretty well tied down here. I realize that now."

"But," she protested faintly, but quite practically, "can we afford it?"

"We're going to afford it," said her husband firmly, as he patted her hand. "I've a little surprise for you Behold your husband, the new ly elected vice-president of the Horney Mercantile Company."

"Oh, Herbert!" cried Marjorie, overcome by the unexpected news. Herbert grinned broadly as he placed his arms about her. "And by the way, Margie, old girl, you can have those clothes you've been wanting. Guess we can afford 'em now—eh?"

FINANCE —AND— BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

At eighty-two, George F. Baker has sailed for a holiday in Europe. Mr. Baker is the financial world's "man of mystery." The early part of his life is unknown to anyone. And although his power in the financial world for many, many years, was second only to that of J. P. Morgan, he still is a stranger to the American public.

Behind the scenes, this octogenarian exercises tremendous influence not only in banking, but in industrial and railroad corporations. The extent of his influence is not due wholly to the extent of his money power—although, as a matter of fact, he is believed by Wall Street to be perhaps the second richest man in America. Those who are associated with Mr. Baker on important directorates declare that his judgment, his vision, his ability are almost uncanny.

Until recent years Mr. Baker didn't realize the fun to be derived from giving away millions. I once wrote a character sketch of him, which referred to the fact that his benefactions, so far as known, were lamentably out of line with his bank account. But shortly afterward he began to give away money quite freely.

* * *

The first big gift was $1,000,000 to the Red Cross, and he followed this up with a second million in the following year. He recently gave $7,000,000 for providing an esthetic fad for Columbia University in New York. And now he has given the Metropolitan Museum of Arts $1,000,000.

His only son, George F. Baker, Jr., is like his father, on the job every day in the Baker financial institution, the First National Bank of New York. Young George is a particularly democratic fellow, and, while industrious, is noted for his skill as a yachtsman. I rather think the giving away of money by his father is heartily endorsed by George F., Jr. He hasn't the reputation of being a skinflint.

* * *

Don't become too sure that rail way employee will not go to the mat over wage reductions. Personally I don't quite like the clouds that are gathering.

* * *

"Come down with your capital and your brainy men and help us to develop our resources."

Richard Schuster, partner of the international banking house of Speyer Co., who has just returned from a trip of investigation in South America, remarked that that was the invitation constantly extended to American. Mr. Schuster found things distinctly on the mend, particularly in the Argentine, in Brazil and in Chile.

* * *

There are two fundamental reasons, however, why American capital and American business men do not seek foreign fields more freely. Mr. Schuster pointed out. Old World countries such as British, France, Germany, Holland, the opportunities for pioneering or other development work are relatively few. As a consequence, both capital and ambitious men turn to possibilities in other parts of the world.

* * *

Business this Summer promises to be less dull than we usually expect in sweltering weather. This applies also to the security markets, particularly the stock market division.

Courtiant, 1922, by B. C. Forbes.

FEDERAL ROAD AID SAVING MILLIONS

Washington, June 5.—Millions of dollars were saved to an Arkansas community in which a Federal-aid road is nearing completion, when the Mississippi River overflowed its banks and the flood began its course of devastation, according to the Department of Agriculture.

During high water in the Mississippi word came to Helena, Arkansas that a levee, 4 miles long, seventeen miles away, was about to break. The situation was critical, and a delay of a few hours meant the flooding of thousands of acres of fertile farming lands and endangering of lives. A small army fully equipped with tools and material was required to meet the emergency, and Helena was the only source of aid.

Every available motor vehicle was pressed into service and more than 600 men, properly equipped for the work, were speeding in a short time over the new road to save the levee.

"They arrived in the nick of time," said the Department, "and by almost superhuman efforts dammed back the rising waters. Had it been necessary to make the trip over the old road the levee could not have been reached in time and the workers would have needed boats rather than motor vehicles."

ARCADIAN OPENS RICH ORE GROUND

Arcadian Consolidated reports more than seventy feet of highly mineralized ore exposed in the face and drift of the 1,100-foot level in New Baltic and considerable mass as well as barrel work extends across the face. To the north good ground also is exposed on all four sides of the drift and because of the high quality of the rock it is not unlikely that this lateral will be driven to the northern boundary of the property.

BOY WRITER INTERVIEWS JUDGE GARY

The Boston American today presents the third of the remarkable series of interviews with men of national prominence obtained by Horace Wade, the world's youngest newspaper reporter. Today's interview is with Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation.

By HORACE WADE

Eleven-year-old author of "In The Shadow of Great Peril" and other novels, who writes exclusively for the Boston American.

Copyright 1922

A man of steel-strong, big, fine, a boy who worked on a farm and got to the head of America's greatest corporation—that's the way Judge Elbert H. Gary looks. Every line in his face talked of strength.

WONDERFULLY KIND.

Pleasant?

Well, he hasn't forgotten the time he played ball, maybe hookey.

I think the wonderful thing about Judge Gary is his kindness. There's something as gentle as a woman in his manner and the tones of his voice drip with sympathy.

I interrupted him in the middle of an important meeting, but he didn't care. He calmly told those with him that "they'd have to wait awhile." The men in the office were James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation and Eugene Thomas, president of the United States Steel Productions.

"What do you think of a boy's opportunity in the steel industry?" I asked him.

START AT THE FOOT.

He stroked his mustache a second, then replied:

"Very good, if the boy starts right and works hard and all the time. A boy shouldn't want to start at the top of the ladder, but, like most of our best men did, start at the bottom and work your way up."

"Would you make a good editor or steel magnate?" I inquired.

"A steel man, certainly. Although, of course, an author can do lots of good," he added.

"But then every man can do a great deal of good if he want to, no matter what his trade be."

THE COUNTRY BOY.

"Has the country boy a chance now?"

Judge Gary scratched his head thoughtfully and drummed on the desk of his room with a pencil.

"Yes," he replied, "if he doesn't come to the city too soon and comes fully prepared. He'd better be certain of the fundamentals before he comes here.

"The country is the place to start, if he starts right and has the right foundation. It all depends on himself—his disposition, character and energy. The average boy knows what he wants big pay and little work. But Horace," here he brought his fist down on the table with an awful bang, "it's all wrong. All wrong."

A WORTHY MOVEMENT.

"What do you think of the Boy Scout movement?" I ventured after he had calmed down.

"It's a worthy movement," he said to me. "It's patriotic. It's good discipline for a boy. But the exercise you get in the Boy Scouts is the same that you get in work. It's a fine thing to teach a young man patriotism."

"Is a college education necessary for a boy?"

"Not absolutely, but it's a fine thing and it is an advantage to any good man. Do you know, I've found that a large majority of the biggest men in this company are not college men but men who would have succeeded wether they had a college education or not?"

"Do you think I can become great?" I inquired.

For answer he reached across the table and pressed a button and a sign became lighted on one side of the room. The sign read:

"It can be done; can't must be overcome."

AIM HIGH, IS ADVICE.

"Horace," he cried, "it can be done. When a high official comes into this room and says that something can't be done, I merely switch this light on."

I asked him if he would give me a message for the boys and girls of America and this is what he said:

"A boy, to be successful, should keep his feet on the ground and look face toward the sky. He must be steady, solid and unswerving in rectitude, in perseverance, honesty and reliability. He should aim high in his desire to achieve and succeed. Any young man or woman in this country can succeed if possessed of the right disposition."

"And what is your favorite virtue?"

"Perseverance."

The word came like a thunderbolt.

RUBBER TOY COSTS LIFE OF CHILD; STOP SALE

Rochester, N. Y., June 5.—Public Safety Commissioner Bareham ordered investigation of the sale of squawkers, following the death by strangulation of Rose Tanetto, aged four, who inhaled the rubber toy in attempting to inflate it. 100,000 TO SEE BIG FURNITURE EXHIBITION

More than 100,000 persons are expected to visit the first Boston furniture show, to be held in the Mechanics Building the week of June 12 if the plans of the backers of the show materialize.

Virtually everything needed for housekeeping is made in New England and much of it far superior in grade to anything manufactured elsewhere. The show is designed to let the general public know just what is being done in this line in this section.

Mayor James M. Curley will be the speaker on the opening day of the exhibit. Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald will speak on Tuesday, John W. Stephenson, editor of the Upholsterer and Interior Decorator, Wednesday, and on Friday the mayors of all New England cities will be present.

The New England Manufacturers Association, the Home Furnishers Association and similar organizations have been aiding Manager De Noyes in making the show a success. Joseph E. Green, of the Jordan Marsh Company, has had charge of the interior decorating and arrangement of furniture.

"BEER SPECIALS" RUN DAILY FROM PROVIDENCE

Providence, June 5.—In the police campaign for rigid enforcement of the state prohibition act, six saloon keepers were arraigned on charges of exposing liquor for sale.

Providence is almost "dry" but the surrounding towns are not. What th: thirsty populace describe as "electric beer specials" are being run daily, and particularly on Sundays and holidays, from Providence to Pawtucket, Johnston, Thornton, Silver Lake, North Providences, Cumberland, Smithfield and other nearby towns where, it is alleged, beer with 3 pre-Volstead kick is sold openly.

POLICE CLAIM HOOTCH IS NOW SOLD BY GROCERS

Activities of near-beer saloons and corner groceries in dispensing various forms of moonshine liquor will be given the immediate attention of Captain Charles W. Reardon's vice squad, according to word from police headquarters.

The liquor is sold in ordinary ketchup and milk bottles at a number of the latter establishments, it is said. A large number of illicit grog shops are said to be located on Harrison and Shawmut avenues in the South End, on Lowell and Causeway streets in the West End, and in various parts of Roxbury and South Boston.

CONGRESS PROBES GAS PRICE PLOT

Washington, June 5.—To find out whether there has been conspiracy and collusion to force up the price of gasoline to the consumer despite the fact that there is in storage more than 854,000,000 gallons, the greatest amount in the history of the country, the Senate Committee on Manufactures is to start an investigation this week.

The advance of the price of one cent per gallon raises the country's gasoline bill by $50,000,000 a year.

During the first three months of the year the nation's production of gas was more than 8,000,000 gallons a day in excess of consumption.

In spite of this the price has been forced upward steadily.

Auction Bridge in Plain Language

S. S. Carvalho on a Game That Develops CONCENTRATION

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Auction bridge and chess, if played occasionally, WITH ATTENTION, develops powers of concentration and, except for minds that are feeble, it is not necessary to have any money or gambling attachment. The game is enough.

Auction bridge, discussed and TAUGHT, in a small book just published by S. S. Carvalho, is in its way a business education.

It compels the player to keep several things in his mind at once, and compels him particularly to ask himself to find out what THE OTHER MAN is planning.

At auction bridge you must think not only of yourself, but even more of your partner, and still more of your two opponents.

You must pay attention to words that are said, bids that are made, cards that are laid down, and know what the words, the bids and the cards MEAN.

You may say of bridge and of chess what Herbert Spencer said to the young man that played billiards so well.

The old philosopher and the young gentleman played just one game. Herbert Spencer made the first shot and missed. The young man started and never stopped until he had won the game.

"Young man," said Herbert Spencer, "anybody that plays billiards as well as you do has wasted a great deal of time in his life."

Except for the occasional genius that can play chess well almost in the cradle, and the natural born card expert that plays well without effort, it is a bad sign when a man plays chess or bridge or any other NON-PRODUCTIVE game TOO well.

As millions play at both games, a hundred at bridge for one that plays chess, it is at least worth while for the player to know just what he is doing, that his mind may get out of the game what useful exercise there is in it.

Mr. Carvalho, whose book, "Complete Auction Bridge for 1922," is published by the Current Book Company, No. 140 Cedar street, New York city, has for years studied chess, an excellent introduction to the study of auction bridge, since it compels intense concentration.

This book is an interesting mental work he publishes, not as a profit-making enterprise, for it is sold at fifty cents, about the cost of production, and a quarter the cost of other books on bridge. It is a book limited to the essentials, it is written in plain English, such as bridge players talk. There is no "abracadabra" about it, no deep mystery.

How to warn your partner, legitimately, how to let him know your strength and your weakness, what to do with cards when you get them—all the complicated technicalities, and the plain common sense of auction bridge, the game that furnishes cheerful amusement for some, and wastes a great deal of time for others, are completely and simply told in Mr. Carvalho's book.

It is a book for beginners and for those that know the game thoroughly.

Treat auction bridge, as Mr. Carvalho and other wise men have done, as a relaxation, rest for the mind, and it will do you good. The great Darwin read fairy stories in the evening to get his mind off his real work.

Make a BUSINESS of bridge, as many of the foolish do, and win or lose, it will make poor business of you.

If the game interests you, read Mr. Carvalho's book, "Complete Auction Bridge for 1922."

Empty Benches of the Senate

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Far more than two-thirds of the speeches made in the American Senate are delivered to a bare handful of listless hearers gathered from the ninety-six great men charged by the people with the solemn duty of presence and serious deliberation.

All the old pictures of the earlier Senate of our fathers represented a full Senate, with crowded galleries hanging upon the words of statesmen. The galleries are nearly always crowded even yet with citizens having some leisure, much curiosity, and some general interest in the affairs of State. But it is a rare day that fills, or half fills, the habitually empty Senate seats.

Senator Caraway, Democrat, fiercely challenged the Republican majority the other day with never having a quorum to transact the vital business of the country in ballot and debate.

Senator Lodge, the leader of the majority, lately read the riot act to the Senate absentees, and threatened to invoke the sergeant-at-arms to round up the missing members on the great tariff measure now under discussion, and Senator Curtis, the Republican whip, introduced and had passed a resolution condemning Republican absenteeism.

What's the matter in Washington? Are American statesmen losing interest in the affairs of government?

Living Under Spell of Fear

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

When Lloyd George said: "It is the fears of nations that make conflicts," he epitomized in a single sentence the fundamental cause of many of the great wars of history.

Of course great war serials, like the Alexandrian and the Napoleonic raids on the world's territories, capturing one country after another in a strategic tandem fashion, are inspired by another motive—boundless ambition and a lust for conquest.

Fear is a degenerating force in an individual or a nation. It operates in the same way in both.

France is in this restless, upset, nervous condition today in her relation to her vanquished enemy.

Whether she is justified, whether she is or is not menaced, the fact remains that she fears, and is not at her best because of her fears.

For well over a century the long frontiers between the United States and Canada have been a stretch of three thousand miles of open roads, without a fort, a soldier or a gunboat.

Fear builds high walls of separation; confidence, open roads worn smooth by the feet of friendship.

"Because"

Editor Boston American:

Daylight Saving is a blessing to us all and especially those working inside all day. I think those who are so dead set against it should give some intelligent reason for feeling as they do. Some letters I have read in the Boston American are enough to make you smile, and about as sensible as the answer I always gave my mother when I was a tiny girl. Whenever I had done mischief, my mother would scold me, and ask why I had done it. I always answered "Because." Now that settled it for me, but my mother was no wiser afterward than before she asked. What under the sun does the rich man care which way the clock is turned? And as for God saying, six o'clock, standard time, shall be six o'clock, it is news to me. When my father was a little boy, and they used candles, they arose as early as they could see in the morning, so they could do their work by daylight, instead of candle light. Daylight saving is for the poor, and it is about time they show some appreciation.

CHRISTINE CRANDALL.

Dog Shooting

Editor Boston American:

I think it is a shame that dogs should be shot on the street. I do not know about other cities, but in the Beachmont section of Revere, there was killed not long ago a pet family dog which caused much distress in the household.

Gross Cruelty

Editor Boston American:

I note in the Boston papers that a raid had been made upon a barn in the vicinity of Springfield, where had been captured some 81 persons and some 100 game cocks; the men being fined $15 each for being present at a cock fight.

The following day I noted that there had occurred probably the biggest free-for-all cockfight which ever took place in the world at the chicken's yard of a West Springfield man. The police, uninitiated in the way of game cocks, had placed the birds captured in one pen and gone away blissfully ignorant of what was bound to happen.

While I do not believe in breaking the laws, still I do believe that these persons in public office are far more deserving of punishment, and that action should be taken to that end by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, or by proper authority. Any city or town or State should be ashamed to have persons in office who have passed the Civil Service examination and duly been elected or appointed to the positions they hold, and yet be so densely ignorant as to think for a moment that birds whose predominant instinct is to fight to the death could be left together in safety. Far more suffering was endured by these birds than when matched with proper weapons.

Under the statute birds so confiscated are to be killed, and they should have been, immediately, not kept in this manner, either through ignorance or carelessness of public officials.

Summer Street Water Holes

Editor Boston American:

Time to repave Summer street. The multitude of puddles and small lakes, especially along the car tracks, makes it difficult to dodge traffic in crossing from sidewalk to sidewalk after it has rained a little. It seems a case of either death by auto or drowning, if I may be permitted to exaggerate slightly.

ONE WHO CANNOT SWIM.

Lighted Cigars in Cars

Editor Boston American:

I notice that men are still occasionally seen in cars of the Elevated railway, holding smoking cigars. The odor is very offensive and as this action is against the rules of the road, I do not understand why the conductors do not stop it.

Wollaston. HENRY RICH.

Against Daylight Saving

Editor Boston American:

I am greatly opposed to daylight-saving and heartily agree with one signed "Afflicted Mother." If one signed B. S. F., is a man, of course he can't see any good reason why daylight-saving should not be. Man being strong and healthy, never could see why mother could not drudge from sunrise to sunset without saying a word.

You are getting up earlier and going to bed later, "Health before Pleasure." If that is not sufficient reason why it should not be, perhaps B. S. F. can give me a good reason why it should be as I fail to see any.

WHEN YOU ARE GIVING GOD A CHANCE

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

IN the good old days of faithful piety it used to be the general belief that God and one are a majority. Commonly enough, this was tried out and found to be a working faith.

The Jews, a mere handful of human beings, long ago were believers of this kind, regarded their nation as the Divine Pet, found themselves the objects of universal hostility, but felt fearless because God was with them.

The fighting prince, whom they expected to deliver them in their extremity, they called Immanuel, "God With Us"; and their national slogan was in the Psalmist's words: "Mine enemies encompassed me, but in the name of the Lord I triumph over them."

That faith enabled the Jews to survive.

Personal Implication

That may sound to the modern reader like ancient stuff, but it has its up-to-date and decidedly personal implications.

Truth has a way of never growing old, though the clothes it wears may cease to be fashionable.

Language is only the clothing of thoughts. Ideas spring from the Eternal Mind and are eternal as their source.

Ages, generations, peoples and persons, in time and place, reclothe everlasting ideas and give them new meanings, monetary currency and local exchange value.

So there is the old Hebraic thought of God and one. God and you. They are still and always a working majority.

In simple Americanese for everyday use, this merely means that you are invincible if you have chosen God for your ally.

He is helpless to help you unless you have selected Him as your helper.

Power Is Yours

After that all power is yours. And all wisdom, all truth, all justice, all beauty—in a word, all worth which, flowing from the world of spirit, gives lasting meaning to our human life.

All these riches and all this strength are yours—to use.

Thus endowed and armored, you are invincible. Man can do nothing to harm you: nor can chance or circumstance.

And so you grow from success to success. You radiate health and power and love. You and God are makers of God.

You allow God to work with you. You permit Him to shine through you. You are giving God a chance.

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

IF today is the day of your birth your character is such that, no matter what your fate may be, your life will be interesting and exciting. Yours is the magnetic personality which draws the lives of others into its vortex. You are destined to a life of rapid transition and engrossing activity.

The ensuing year will be one of the darkest of your whole life. You will suffer both on account of your own misdeeds and also on account of the misdeeds of others.

Children born today will be kind and affectionate and of merry disposition.

Famous person shorn this day:

George T. Angell, founder of the Humane Society.

Lyman Spalding, physician and author.

Henry Wurtz, chemist.

Columbus Delano, Secretary of the Interior.

ARE YOU LAZY OR JUST CARELESS?

Examining a beautiful little mantel vase of cloisonne, a young man, calling on a girl, thought he discovered a defect inside the neck and asked, "What is this black spot?"

"Oh, just a bit of ink from my fountain pen—I sometimes put it in there," she replied.

"Why don't you wash it?" he returned.

That was just the point. Knowing the ink blemished the beauty of a rare bit of porcelain, why didn't she wash it?

Knowing that you have spots on your outer garments, why do you not clean them?

Aware that you need glasses, why do you not get them in time?

Having been told that your standards are not high enough to qualify for a certain position, why do you not raise them?

Knowing that things are not as they should be, why do you not make an effort to get them right?

There are some who are lazy, some who are carelessly indifferent, and others who cannot see the necessity of being clean and orderly and systematic, either mentally or physically.

To which class do you belong?

SEEN AND HEARD

By Lambert

ALBERT P. LANGTRY, former Secretary of State, has gone to Brooklyn to attend the reunion of the Brooklyn Times staff of forty years ago. When LANGTRY was on the staff the reporters wore beards and high, silk hats, black ones in the Summer, white in the Winter. That was forty years ago.

When CHIEF BALD EAGLE visited the State House the other day he was taken to the Hall of Flags and there shown the beautiful painting of "Roger Williams" preaching to the early Indians. The chief learned history that he will have to unlearn. The man preaching to the Indians was John Eliot.

REPRESENTATIVE LORING P. JORDAN of Wakefield, who filed the petition for the removal of Justice Edward P. Pierce of the Supreme Court, has resigned his seat in the House. He has become Assistant Register of Probate of Middlesex County.

The boy students of the Quincy School Prevocational Class have given to Governor Cox a vise fashioned by them in their classroom. A card was attached to it, with these words: "You have no vice. You gave us advice. We give you this Yankee vise."

FRANK W. PHINNEY and WILLIAM LANCASTER are going to run for re-election to the House from the 24th Suffolk District. They will have to get another Republican to make up their usual team of three, as Representative LEO S. HAMBURGER has decided to make a try for the Senate.

WILLIAM J. LOOK has made the long trip from the Cape to the House for seven years. He is willing to make it for two years more if he can be elected to the Senate.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON SHOOTING STARS

By Garrett P. Serviss

"'A' saw a shooting-star; 'B' claims that said shooting-star after being seen by 'A' must either have hit the earth or burnt itself out very soon; 'C' says the shooting-star did not necessarily burn itself out or hit the earth, and may be going around in space for years to come. What we would like to have you make clear is: Can a shooting star have an orbit of its own, like a comet? Doesn't its hitting the air make friction, thus bringing it down to the earth, depending upon its size?

—J. J. M., South Norwalk."

I'D not give much for the chance of escape that a meteor (shooting-star) would have after once making a plunge into the atmosphere of the earth. The bare possibility perhaps exists that it might get away, if it didn't venture too deep, or if its impact with the airy shell was at a low, glancing angle; yet I doubt if such getaways occur.

The earth goes humming through space, picking up millions of meteors every twenty-four hours and swallowing them like a whale scooping in minnows, and yet the big globe doesn't become perceptibly heavier, which not only shows how small a thing a meteor is, but also indicates how little the likelihood must be of any evasions.

But the case becomes different when the meteor passes the earth without getting involved in the net of the atmosphere. Then, though its course would be altered by the earth's attraction, and it might become another satellite of the earth, it would at least avoid destruction. Every meteor, however small, has its orbit, although they often travel in enormous flocks and swarms, and they can claim to be common citizens or subjects, together with the earth and the other planets, of the sun's gravitational empire.

The sun stamps its guarantee of independent citizenship upon these little flying bodies by endowing them with more than planetary speed. They seem to share in the high velocity of the comets, from which great schools of them are believed to have been born—though at the expense of the existence of their cometary mothers. In passing the earth on their orbital flights toward or away from the sun, their speed appears to exceed that of the earth in the ratio of the square root of 2 to 1, which shows that they travel with parabolic velocity. The earth's orbital speed being 18½ miles per second, and the square root of 2 being 1.41, the velocity of meteors near the earth comes out at about 26 miles per second. But the velocity with which they strike the air varies with the direction of their motion.

If they meet the earth "head on" their velocity is to be added to the earth's, and the sum becomes 44½ miles per second, while if they overtake the earth in its course, like birds overtaking a car, they enter the atmosphere with a velocity equal to the difference of the two speeds, viz., 7½ miles per second.

Of course, the higher their relative initial velocity on meeting the air the greater the effect of the resistance, or friction, to which they are subjected, this effect being expressed in a slowing down of their motion and in an enormously rapid rise of temperature, which almost instantaneously reaches a degree far above the resisting power of any known substance, so that they are not only dissipated in puffs of gas, but probably their temperature is so high that their elements are changed by the breaking up of their atoms.

Medbury Says—

Says You Might as Well Hope for the Best, Even if You Can't Afford the Worst

Now that the price of merchandise is going up, window shoppers are becoming more numerous every day. Shoppers who just used to look and never bought anything are now economizing by looking in the cheaper stores.

Women who have been in the habit of gazing at high-priced articles are cutting down expenses by rubbering at inexpensive goods.

They refuse to stare at any more merchandise until the merchants come down in their prices.

It used to be that a woman could rubber at a beautiful hundred-dollar coat, and now she has to stand and look at it for two hundred dollars.

She figures she's being cheated, even if she doesn't buy it.

Her time is valuable and she can't spend all day looking at a coat like that when she could go to some other store and admire a cheaper one.

Still, when a dame would like to have a coat she might as well wish she could buy a good one.

You might as well hope for the best, even if you can't afford the worst.

The average woman will look over a suit for flaws, but the only one she can find is in the price tag.

She wants to criticize the suit so badly that she waits till somebody comes in to buy it so that she can do it.

She wouldn't buy it for herself but she'd pick it to pieces for you.

If there's nothing the matter with the suit she'll make you keep trying them on until you find one she can criticize.

She can't be too careful about the clothes you buy.

She figures that two minds are better than one, especially when one of them is blank.

One dame always told her friends that she purchased her clothes wholesale. She wanted them to think that she bought a lot of them.

She buys her suits made to measure, but not to hers.

She wants a fit and if the tailor doesn't give her one, the price will.

The average woman likes to be well-dressed when she has callers. If you can't afford beautiful clothes, go down to a department store and try a new dress on and have your friends call at the store before you take it off.
